Mentor article influence

My mentor article from the site pitchfork wires music reviews on musical works of multiple genres. For this reason it was a good choice to choose them as my source for a mentor article. Another reason why is because I am also doing a musical review on the artist Dave East. In the mentor articles and research I've done, writers for pitchfork gives a broad but honest reviews on music. Not only that but they give the reader a sense of what caliber the artist they're writing about is, they compare their work with others so the reader can have a sense of where that artist stands next to another. For example if the review a review is being written on Juice Wrld, they would compare his most recent or older music to another artist such as xxxtentacion so that you a see the difference between the two artist so that some listeners don't say that they sound the same or that one person is copying the other. Another thing that pitchfork writers do that influenced me is that the compare the artist works against each other, not to say which is better or but to show that the artist is capable of doing multiple genres at a time. They would compare songs that have the same vibe, rhythm, lyrics, genre, all the while remaining broad and u biased, though you interpret some of the songs being said as opinions.
