

New York Historical Society Archive Response

We went to visit the NY historical society to find out about how many unique and old collections they have. By visiting the NY historical society, we have seen many old collections the librarian put it for us on the table. In this Archive response, I am going to talk about two things that seems interesting to me.

The first thing that grab my attention was the “Real estate record and builders' guide. “It was pretty thick guide, with all the real estate and builders names which helped back then to build railroads and tracks. Looking at that guide and seeing all those names I can tell how many builders and real estates have made New York train stations and buildings. It was published in 1913 so probably all the real estates and builders are death by now but their names are saved forever as building up New York City. I couldn't find the name that gathered all the information that's in this guide but I am sure who ever did this. The person was really into building.

The second thing that grab my attention was the book I actually read for my assignment for this class was “Grand Central Terminal: Railroads, Engineering, and Architecture in New York City “it is detailed book about how the grand central was build. The book contains four chapters, From Commodore's Grand Central to Engineer’s Grand Central to Architect’s Grand Central and lastly The New York’s Grand Central. Each chapter tells you specific details about how Grand Central transforms New York City in the way it is now.it was published in 2001 its not an old book so I don’t know this is in NY historical society maybe the history of Grand Central are very detailed and good in this book that’s why they put it there. By reading this I could say, the author of this book love Grand Central that’s why he gathered all little detail about Grand Central.
