Reflection: After observing, it can be seen that a condensed typeface can be troublesome to read. With the similar feeling in a wider typeface, the user may view these types of font widths as uneasy and complicated. Meanwhile the regular font width is functional.

Reflection: When working with tracking, I notice that with negative tracking it makes the word tricky to read, this may not cater for all audiences and exclude those with visual impairments. This type of tracking is not suitable. Although while looking at the word that contains no tracking, it is easy to read, legible, and clear for users to see. Furthermore, the word that has positive tracking is loose and while it makes it simple to see the letters itself it is hard to read.

Government CorruptionA Broken Trust*

There's no doubt that government corruption is an extensive and constant issue, having an impact on nearly every country or region. From using corruption as a threat for power to poverty and inequality. Government corruption is known as the label of dishonesty amongst those who maintain power positions in the political system. It's also famously known to be the main cause of a variety of universal issues happening right now. From forms of bribery to plain lying, this system is more than what it seems.

Set Solid: 11 pt / 11 pt

Positive Leading: 11 pt / 20 pt

Positive Leading: 11 pt / 15 pt

Reflection: While observing, it's prominent that with negative leading space, the line spacing is crushed—tight. Making it extremely difficult to understand. On the other hand, with the set solid, the text still displays the feeling of closure and tightness which makes it unpleasant to the eye. Meanwhile, with positive leading space, the text seems to be easier to read but the lines are too far apart where the space between is too much. I believe the positive space of using 15 pt is legible and is delicate and aesthetic to read.

Force Justified - Times New Roman Regular 17 pt

Reflection: After examining, it's visually evident that the text on the left is effortless to read as the title and text is aligned in the center allowing it to be easier. With the text that is forced justified: words get cut off from one line to another, the title text is extremely far apart from one another and the words in the paragraph are spaced out a lot more than they need to be. Making it heavy on the eyes.
