Dear Professor Belli and Readers,

During the process of revising my project I have narrowed my thoughts and ideas and have focused on how dystopian societies correlate to our modern day society. I have found more sources to support my ideas and help me provide more information for my audience. I have learned through my research that in some ways that people in power govern their countries can be justified as a modern version of a dystopia. I am still doing research and seeing if I could find better articles that can directly support my topic.

While doing my project I struggled with trying to organize all my ideas. In the process of preparing for this project I had a lot of ideas that I wanted to discuss because the idea of Utopia and Dystopia can touch base on a lot of the things I learned throughout the semester. As I continued to revise I eventually stuck to one idea I could further elaborate with. I figured I would be able to discuss the effects the government has on certain countries around the world that can be correlated to a dystopian society. Well writing my project I could say one thing that I have done well is find great sources that correlate to my topic and can help me support my ideas and thoughts. During the process of preparing my project I have developed as a writer/thinker because this class has allowed me to think outside the box and be open to many ideas that we have discussed as a class. This has allowed me to be able to be more informative and elaborate with my work in order to make my content more interesting and fascinating for my audience.
