

Rashed Saitat

Qoutes

"I was ashamed of her english"

"Sociologists and linguists probably will tell you that a person's developing language skills are influenced by peers"

" I happen to be a rebellious in nature and enjoy the challenge of disproving assumptions made about me

"I wanted to capture what language ability tests can never reveal her intent, her passion, her imagery, the rhythms of her speech and the nature of her thoughts!"

Answer to qoutes

I don't agree with her on that. Because even if her mother didn't speak fluent english she shouldn't be ashamed of her mother. Instead she should help her learn english so she can improve her speaking ability.

I agree with her on that statement. Because you learn various aspects of language from either your family members or friends. They are the two groups of people you spend majority of your time with.

It's a very interesting statement. Because you shouldn't let other judge you or make wrong assumption about you. End of the day everyone has unique characteristics and potential to stand against social phenomenon.

I agree that language ability tests can't reveal someone's passion the way they imagine and their creativity. Because everyone has their own way to express what they're trying to express.