I would describe myself as a peaceful and calm writer because I try to include as much details as possible so the reader can understand what points I am trying to point out. As I first began to write essays it was obviously in elementary school in the third grade. The state test was a tough achievement for me as a young child but I never failed once. Without the help of my grandmother pushing me throughout the years I wouldn't be here today writing this. She is a very important person to me because of her works. She never gave up on me and she always taught me the ways to write properly. She also taught me how to read all type of books. When my mother and father went out I used to want to stay home with my grandmother and read or write or do both. I am the oldest of 6 kids so I had to set an example for my younger siblings. I've gained a lot of insights from my grandmother. She is one of my role models because she is a very hard working person and I look up to her very dearly. I try not to take a lot for granted because that one thing you could always have every day could be gone the next. My grandmother took over my parents job because they were very young when they had me so I was fortunate on the education part with my grandmother's teachings. My thoughts and ideas would always wonder around when I write though. Some days I would be off and some days i would be on point. It's just how my days went. I also like to rap though because I could express my feelings throughout the song. It really helps me to clear my mind and take stress off. Writing also benefits me for my future because I never know what I can be one day that involves my reading and writing skills. I also plan on being something in the sports or computer engineering category. Both jobs can include writing and reading such as being a reporter or commentator for a sports event or scene. Writing down the steps to making a blueprint for computer engineering would be involved too. But if these didn't work out for me I would have went with business.

There are multiple majors that require english credits to get your degree. I just hope to achieve all to get to that level. But writing always meant something special to me due to writing down your thoughts or feelings. Something I'm always afraid of when I'm writing is getting stuck up on what to say after, but luckily my thoughts are always lingering.
