Conclusion

The ideal consumer for pant suits are worn by women who come from an upper middle class background that live a classy lifestyle. Even though they are often busy; these women make time to be trend conscious and fashion forward. Many celebrities have also been seen sporting these trends and high fashion designers have been implementing these designs on attire which is why they can be easily spotted in recent collections at fashion week.

To summarize our forecast on these trends that include large pockets, plaid, high waisted, single breasted, double breasted, shoulder pads, longline blazers and wide leg pants; they will continue to appear in the future designs for women apparel. Majority of the trends that we have touched upon in this report have been through a constant cycle of reincarnation. They will provide functionality, sustainability and comfort for apparel in pant suits. Women first wore suits to mirror men in their male-dominated workplace. But in the now-casual office women are redefining the suit in their own image (Fast Company, 2018).

Women have worn pant suits for years, once a number of women had begun entering the workforce. The trends and the pant suits in general will continue to grow in popularity since there is a high demand for it. Many designers and brands will start implementing these eight trends into their collections to provide the target consumers the right form of functionality and fashion forward looks to tie in together with their pant suits. These pant suits are a form of power dressing and symbolize freedom and equality.
