

Dolalys Villavicencio.

"My mother has long realized the limitations of her English as well. When I was fifteen, she used to have me call people on the phone to pretend I was she."

Pg 2

I agree and I also can relate with this quote because what the author is explaining here it's something that happens most of the time in our society. For example, that's something that I had to do, help my mom whenever she needed help translating something.

"But to me, my mother's English is perfectly clear, perfectly natural." Pg 1

I agree with this quote because nobody should be judge by the way they speak their second language. People should put themselves on the other persons shoes and think how they would feel about if someone would make fun of them for a language they're not really used to.

"I began to write stories using all the Englishes I grew up with: The English I spoke to my mother, which for a lack of a better term might be described as "broken". Pg 3

I think this quote is really powerful and I agree with it because it's really thoughtfull the way she wrote her story in a way her mom any any other person could understand.

"Apart from what any critic had to say about my writing. I knew I had succeeded where it counted when my mother finished reading my book and gave me her verdict "So easy to read". " Pg 4

I agree with this quote from the author because I think it's really important that the author expresses themselves in a way that everyone is able to understand.
