CURRICULUM MODIFICATION PROPOSAL FORM

Title of Proposal	Minor in Creative Writing
Date	November 28, 2022
Major or Minor	Major Change
Proposers' Names	Jennifer Sears-Pigliucci, Robert Ostrom, Daniel Ryan
Department	English
Date of Departmental Meeting in which proposal was approved	February 2, 2023
Department Chair Name	Suzanne Miller
Department Chair Signature and Date
Academic Dean Name	Justin Vazquez-Poritz
Academic Dean Signature and Date
Brief Description of Proposal	This proposal outlines and articulates the rationale for a twelve-credit academic minor in Creative Writing, including two new courses, "Writing Fiction" and "Writing Nonfiction: Memoir and the Personal Essay" (as well as changes to existing English course titles, numbers, and descriptions to more clearly show course progression within this academic minor.) Students who complete requirements in the minor will be able to add the designation "Minor in Creative Writing" to their transcript.
Brief Rationale for Proposal	Our students have diverse stories to share. This minor offers them the means to fulfill this need, with opportunities for self-exploration and self-examination, methods to craft the stories they want to tell, and techniques to transfer their ideas into the public realm. Writing about one's lived experiences has real-world application for professional and personal growth; this minor presents an opportunity for students to harness language authentically and impactfully. Through craft-focused study in a variety of genres, students will develop creative problem-solving, critical writing, close reading, and research skills. As a result, students who complete the Minor in Creative Writing will become more thoughtful and confident readers and writers, which will enhance their undergraduate courses across the curriculum, post-graduate work, careers, and the communities in which they are involved. In the new fiction and nonfiction courses specifically, students will develop crucial genre-specific skills in writing and narrative craft. These courses are important to the department and the college, as they will supplement our existing courses to provide a robust, competitive creative writing minor. (Nine of the eleven CUNY senior schools offer correlating fiction courses; four offer nonfiction.)

Proposal History	This is the initial submission of all parts of this proposal. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • The section of this proposal regarding changes to existing course titles, numbers, and descriptions was approved by the English Department's Literature Committee on Dec. 15, 2022.

PROPOSAL FOR A MINOR IN CREATIVE WRITING

RATIONALE

Our students have stories, ideas, and diverse experiences to share, and creative writing courses offer opportunities for students to fulfill this need as they explore ways to develop and transfer these ideas into the public realm. This Minor in Creative Writing offers students opportunity for self-examination, craft-focused study in a variety of writing genres to sharpen critical writing and reading abilities, as well as a means to develop creative problem-solving skills as they pursue creative work within the larger context of academic study. Students pursuing this minor will be exposed to a variety of approaches to writing, literary, and scholarly conversations, as they consider and practice methods of writing skills in workshop and classroom settings. Students who complete the Minor in Creative Writing will become more thoughtful and confident readers and writers, skills that will enhance their undergraduate courses across the curriculum, post-graduate work, careers, and the communities and organizations in which they are involved.

As the number and success of academic minors at City Tech continues to grow, this program will offer students an opportunity equivalent to those attending other CUNY colleges. Eight of the eleven CUNY senior colleges currently offer a minor in Creative Writing or an equivalent: Brooklyn College, City College, Hunter College, John Jay College, Lehman College, Medgar Evers College, Queens College, and York College.¹ With creation of this academic minor, City Tech will be CUNY's foremost STEM-focused college offering a creative writing concentration. Also unique to our department is our extensive resources in science fiction and the annual Science Fiction Symposium. Our graduates in those fields with ongoing mathematical, scientific and technological advances will benefit from the values and practices of creativity and compassion, crucial elements for the development and ethical application of these advancements within our human society.

City Tech students have demonstrated continued interest in creative writing courses offered by City Tech's English department.² A Minor in Creative Writing will offer students an opportunity to further pursue this interest.³ The foundational course in this proposed minor, ENG 1141 Introduction to Creative Writing, was first offered in the fall semester of 2007 and has filled to an average percent of 90% or higher with increasing sections since that time. During the difficult years of the pandemic, the course was filled at 97.92 to 100%, serving between 72-120 students each semester. Our newer course ENG 1142: Introduction to Poetry Writing has shown strong enrollment since its launch in Spring 2020, running at capacity (100%) with two sections in Spring 2022.² Thus, this Creative Writing minor option aims to build on demonstrated student interest.

Lastly, offering this minor would allow our students' creative work and interests to be officially recognized on their transcripts and potentially offer increased opportunities in their graduate education, careers, and professional trajectories.

DETAILED DESCRIPTION OF THE PROPOSED MINOR

² See Index Item 2: Enrollment Report: ENG 1141 and ENG 1142 \(City Tech AIRE\)

³ See Index Item 3: Student Interest Survey

The 12-credit pathway for the Academic Minor in Creative Writing begins with the required foundational course, ENG 1141, Introduction to Creative Writing, introducing students to writing in a range of creative genres. After successful completion of ENG 1141, students will choose two more creative writing courses from ENG 2142: Writing Poetry; ENG 2143: Writing for Stage and Screen, ENG 2144: Writing Fiction (new course); and ENG 2145: Writing Nonfiction: Memoir and the Personal Essay (new course). The remaining three credits will be drawn from select writing and literature courses offered by the English department. Students seeking to transform their written fiction or nonfiction writing into multimodal compositions and/or create new written works that can be adapted into multimodal compositions will have the option, with instructor approval, to take courses drawn from the English department's existing Major in Professional and Technical Writing, ENG 2720 and ENG 3760. Students pursuing this academic minor will also be encouraged to participate in writing-centered activities offered by the department and college, including the Literary Arts Festival, the Annual Science Fiction Symposium, and City Tech Writer, making pursuit of this academic minor an opportunity to enhance students' experience of the college's larger creative community.

This pathway for the Minor in Creative Writing will be available to students in major programs with 12 or more credits available in General Education Flexible Common Core and College Option Requirements. Students should be advised by their major departments as to how to take courses for this minor in a way that would help fulfill their contributory credits. Additional advising for the Creative Writing minor will be conducted by a member of the English department designated as the program director/point person.

The required foundational course for the proposed Creative Writing minor curriculum, ENG 1141: Introduction to Creative Writing, has a prerequisite of ENG 1101 or ENG 1101CO or ENG 1101ML. Thus, most full-time students will be able to declare this minor and enroll in courses to fulfill requirements as early as their second semester of course work at the College. As with the College's major programs, students must earn a C or above in all minor course work to be granted this minor designation on their transcripts.

ASSESSMENT STATEMENT

To assess student learning outcomes, an exit survey will be administered for students completing the Academic Minor to provide the opportunity to share overall feedback and thoughts with the academic community about the Academic Minor and how students benefited. Enrollment trends will also be tracked, as well as rates of completion and grade distributions. Graduation and retention rates, successful completion, and time to graduation for students declaring the Academic Minor might also be compared with those of the overall student population. Additionally, grade distributions for the classes taken by students declaring the Academic Minor could be compared with those of the general population of students who take these classes.

DIVERSITY AND INCLUSIVE EDUCATION STATEMENT

All courses in the Creative Writing Minor will include in their syllabi and adhere to the statement created by the College Council's Curriculum subcommittee, Diversity and Inclusion in the Curriculum and Education:

Diversity and Inclusive Education Syllabus Statement

This course welcomes students from all backgrounds, experiences, and perspectives. In accordance with the City Tech and CUNY missions, this course intends to provide an atmosphere of inclusion, respect, and the mutual appreciation of differences so that together we can create an environment in which all students can flourish. It is the instructor's goal to provide materials and activities that are welcoming and accommodating of diversity in all of its forms, including race, gender identity and presentation, ethnicity, national origin, religion, cultural identity, socioeconomic background, sexuality and sexual orientation, ability, neurodivergence, age, etc. Your instructor is committed to equity and actively seeks ways to challenge institutional racism, sexism, ableism and other forms of prejudice. Your input is encouraged and appreciated. If a dynamic that you observe or experience in the course concerns you, you may respectfully inform your instructor without fear of how your concerns will affect your grade. Let your instructor know how to improve the effectiveness of the course for you personally, or for other students or student groups. We acknowledge that NYCCT is located on the traditional homelands of the Canarsie and Lenape peoples.

COURSE OUTLINE

ENG 2144 – Writing Fiction

New York City College of Technology/CUNY
English Department

3 hours, 3 credits

Prerequisite: ENG 1101 or ENG 1101 CO or ENG 1101 ML

Detailed Course Rationale:

In this era of evolving writing modalities, formal study in creative writing has become an increasingly visible and valued component of undergraduate and graduate programs within our university and throughout the country, with fiction writing courses comprising an important component of these offerings. Offering a course in fiction writing will provide students with strategies for understanding fiction and narrative craft as they develop as writers and as closer readers. Like all skills that engage the creative imagination, students in this course will discover, develop, and value the experiences they have to tell as they learn to integrate those observations into the framework of narrative and story.

In developing skills and sensitivities specific to writing fiction, students will consider the unique relationship between speaker, language, and audience, while improving confidence and command of their writing skills. Students will examine traditional and contemporary examples of fiction writing from a diverse range of cultures to analyze how professional writers compose aspects of character and multiple points of view, inhabit and write from the perspectives of characters like and unlike themselves, build dramatic tension through the effects of plot, time, and temporal tense; and, combine language, dialogue, and vocabulary to reach their desired effect. Students will then apply these techniques to their own compositions in short story writing assignments, discussions of novel outlines, and research into the techniques and lives of fiction writings, adding a deeper layer of understanding of how these creative concepts function.

The workshop environment in its traditional and changing formats is integral to this creative writing course. Thus, students will consider the impact of audience and how to consider who they are writing for and how they can shape their fiction to reach their desired audience. They will also learn how to offer and receive critique in a professional, compassionate, and thoughtful manner, developing an appreciation for literary citizenship. Finally, they will also learn the discipline required for the drafting and revising process that accompanies all creative production. The discipline of fiction writing, with its attention to detail and to the subtleties of human thought and emotion, will serve students in their professional, creative, and personal goals.

Detailed Course Description:

Students in this course will practice the craft of writing fiction through writing exercises, literary analysis, class workshop, and discussion. They will study works by accomplished fiction writers and craft fiction of their own in a seminar and workshop setting. Students will examine and practice a variety of craft elements and techniques to understand how works of fiction are created. Students will consider ways to: develop plot and story structure to shape their stories; create characters that inhabit the unique worlds of their fiction; listen and craft dialogue; convey pacing and conflict; utilize language, verbal precision, and tone to that fit their unique experience and voice; consider how to draft longer works, such as the novel; and integrate these elements to create works that explore their expression of the human condition. Readings drawn from a wide range of fiction styles and diverse voices will supplement and inform writing exercises and longer writing projects. They will also conduct research to help them develop close reading skills and better understand choices made by successful writers of fiction. Finally, they will learn and apply their growing knowledge of the discipline to craft effective drafts and revisions of original creative work.

Course Specific Learning Outcomes:

By the end of this course, students will be able to:

- Identify various forms of the fiction genre, such as short fiction, flash fiction, and novels as well as various genres within those forms, including literary, mystery fiction, science, and experimental fiction.
- Examine traditional and contemporary examples of fiction writing from a diverse range of cultures to analyze how professional writers compose effective fiction
- Recognize the role of various techniques in the composition of fiction and how professional writers employ them.
- Analyze craft elements specific to fiction, including characterization, point of view, tone, setting, figurative language, and traditional and experimental plot structure and apply these into their own compositions
- Develop a process for conceiving, drafting, and revising short works of original fiction that demonstrate compelling content and voice, and familiarity with the elements of fiction.
- Work with peers in a workshop setting, learning how to identify strengths to improve specific elements of fiction as well as methods for receiving and delivering effective constructive critique, with the goal of improving one's own creative development
- Conduct research into the subjects of their writing and/or into the work and lives of fiction writers

General Education Learning Outcome and Assessment Table

General Education Learning Outcomes	Assessment Measures
KNOWLEDGE: Breadth of Knowledge Identify and write various fictional elements, techniques, forms, and genres.	Assess the ability to identify various fictional elements, techniques, forms and genres by responding to and grading student writing, assignments, and exercises.

SKILLS: Communication Conceive, draft and revise stories and longer works that demonstrate the ability to effectively employ various elements of fiction and that communicate to a larger audience.	Assess the ability to write an effective story or novel elements that communicate to an audience through a process of research, observation, contemplation, drafting, workshopping, and revision.
INTEGRATION: Information Literacies: Research subjects for stories and longer works; read and make close observation of work by professional writers; and compose works of fiction that integrate both knowledge of the genre and the ability to combine various elements of fiction in original work.	Assess student integration of their research and practice of fictional techniques through assessment of exercises and larger assignments.
VALUES, ETHICS, AND RELATIONSHIPS: Community/Civic Engagement: Fiction writing provides students with a wider range of means for exploring the world, others' observations of it, and their own thinking about it. The tools of fiction and storytelling aid students' understanding of the relationship between speaker, language, and audience, while helping them improve their command of language and communicate with others.	Assess student engagement with the world, with their individual perceptions of it, and with their responses to it by grading and commenting on exercises, assignments, and original writing. Assess student performance in the in-class workshop and their response to others in group activities.
VALUES, ETHICS, AND RELATIONSHIPS: Global/ Multicultural Orientation Studying fiction and storytelling allows students to cultivate understanding of how people respond to common human experiences, and to understand the linguistic tools people have used to do so. In studying writing by authors (and fellow students) of diverse cultural, religious, ethnic and racial backgrounds, students learn to understand and inhabit other perspectives and develop the capacity to engage with a diverse society with sensitivity and increased cultural awareness.	Assess awareness of the world's diversity, and the ability to contextualize fiction within specific cultural traditions, by grading and commenting on original writing. Assess student performance in the in-class workshop and their response to others in group activities.

Course Syllabus Statements

Diversity and Inclusive Education Syllabus Statement:

This course welcomes students from all backgrounds, experiences and perspectives. In accordance with the City Tech and CUNY missions, this course intends to provide an atmosphere of inclusion, respect, and the mutual appreciation of differences so that together we can create an environment in which all students can flourish. It is the instructor's goal to provide materials and activities that are welcoming and accommodating of diversity in all of its forms, including race, gender identity and presentation, ethnicity, national origin, religion, cultural identity, socioeconomic background, sexuality and sexual orientation, ability, neurodivergence, age, and etc. Your instructor is committed to equity and actively seeks ways to challenge institutional racism, sexism, ableism and other forms of prejudice. Your input is encouraged and appreciated. If a dynamic that you observe or experience in the course concerns you, you may respectfully inform your instructor without fear of how your concerns will affect your grade. Let your instructor know how to improve the effectiveness of the course for you personally, or for other students or student groups. We acknowledge that NYCCT is located on the traditional homelands of the Canarsie and Lenape peoples. Though we are not in a physical classroom, we are still a community. Respect for everyone in our course (not just the professor) is crucial.

Accessibility Statement:

City Tech is committed to supporting the educational goals of enrolled students with disabilities in the areas of enrollment, academic advisement, tutoring, assistive technologies, and testing accommodations. If you have or think you may have a disability, you may be eligible for reasonable accommodations or academic adjustments as provided under applicable federal, state and city laws. You may also request services for temporary conditions or medical issues under certain circumstances. If you have questions about your eligibility or would like to seek accommodation services or academic adjustments, you can leave a voicemail at 718-260-5143, send an email to Accessibility@citytech.cuny.edu, or visit the Center's website at <http://www.citytech.cuny.edu/accessibility/> for more information.

New York City College of Technology Policy on Academic Integrity:

Students and all others who work with information, ideas, texts, images, music, inventions, and other intellectual property owe their audience and sources accuracy and honesty in using, crediting, and citing sources. As a community of intellectual and professional workers, the College recognizes its responsibility for providing instruction in information literacy and academic integrity, offering models of good practice, and responding vigilantly and appropriately to infractions of academic integrity. Accordingly, academic dishonesty is prohibited in The City University of New York and at New York City College of Technology and is punishable by penalties, including failing grades, suspension, and expulsion. The complete text of the College policy on Academic Integrity may be found in the catalog.

NEW COURSE PROPOSAL FORM

Course Title	Writing Nonfiction: Memoir and the Personal Essay
Proposal Date	November 28, 2022
Proposer's Name	Professor Sean Scanlan
Course Number	ENG 2145
Course Credits, Hours	3 credits; 3 hours
Course Prerequisites	ENG 1101 or ENG 1101 CO or ENG 1101 ML
Catalog Course Description	An introduction to memoir and personal essay writing. Course topics include strategies and techniques to develop an autobiographical point of view, a unique reflective voice, storyline, expression, dialogue, effective language use, and strategies for revision. Read from a variety of genres and forms of memoir, autobiography, personal essays, journals, letters, and diaries to analyze choices and techniques used by professional writers. The workshop portion of this course introduces methods for receiving and delivering effective constructive feedback with the goal of improving one's own creative development.
Brief Rationale	This course explores personal, reflective writing as a means of expressing one's own experiences and truth. It offers students a place to develop skills in memoir and personal essay writing with an emphasis on narrative craft, and encourages self-exploration and developing of lived experiences that students have to tell. These writing, close reading, and research skills can be applied to a variety of majors and to life goals. Writing about one's personal experiences has real-world application for career, personal growth, and well-being because it presents an authenticity that harnesses language to both experience and trust. This course is important to the department and the college as it is unique among course offerings at the College and is part of a developing Creative Writing minor.

ENG 2145 – Writing Nonfiction: Memoir and the Personal Essay

New York City College of Technology/CUNY
English Department

3 hours; 3 credits

Prerequisite: ENG 1101 or ENG 1101 CO or ENG 1101 ML

Detailed Course Rationale:

Offering a course in nonfiction writing will provide students with strategies for understanding the craft of essay and narrative writing as they develop as writers and as closer readers. Like all skills that engage the creative imagination, students in this course will discover, develop, and value the experiences they have to tell as they learn to integrate those observations into the framework of essays and narratives.

Parallel to other writing courses in the creative writing minor, this course focuses on helping students consider the unique relationship between speaker, language, and audience, while improving confidence and command of their writing skills. Students will examine traditional and contemporary examples of memoir and personal essays from a diverse range of cultures to analyze how professional writers inhabit and write from experience, compose aspects of character and multiple points of view, and combine language, dialogue, and vocabulary to reach their desired effect. Students will then apply these techniques to their own personal essay writing assignments, and research various techniques used by professional writers.

The workshop environment in its traditional and changing formats is integral to this creative writing course. Thus, students will consider the impact of audience and how to consider who they are writing for and how they can shape their personal essays to reach their desired audience. They will also learn how to offer and receive critique in a professional, compassionate, and thoughtful manner, developing an appreciation for literary citizenship. Finally, they will also learn the discipline required for the drafting and revising process that accompanies all creative production. The discipline of memoir and personal essays, with its attention to detail and to the subtleties of human thought and emotion, will serve students in their professional, creative, and personal goals.

Detailed Course Description:

This course is a creative writing course that focuses on the construction, consolidation, and articulation of identity in two major types of life writing: memoirs and personal essays. In addition, other forms of personal writing will be explored such as creative nonfiction essays, life writing, autobiography, memoir, journals, and biography in order to wrestle with and understand the history and development of the contested idea of character and identity. The primary process by which students will approach memoir and personal essay writing is by writing assignments, literary analysis, class workshop, and discussion. Considerations of identity, experience, structure, language, dialogue, and especially voice will be at the forefront of the class. Students will read a wide selection of authors from different cultures and from different times. Reading selections will invite questions on the ways that identity is structured by writing techniques, and the ways that writing is influenced by race, gender, ethnicity, sexuality, religion, and historical/economic context. An important component of this course will focus on the practice of life writing in multiple formats such as personal essays, blog entries, and photo/video memoirs. The class will conduct research into technical aspects of personal writing, close reading methods, and professional writers in the genre. We will apply our growing knowledge of the discipline to write effective drafts that will be material for thoughtful, reflective peer review workshops. These sessions will, in turn, lead to sharing work with each other in class and with the broader community through traditional and digital platforms.

Course Specific Learning Outcomes:

By the end of this course, students will be able to:

- Identify various forms of the memoir and personal essay genre, such as journals, letters, autobiography, personal essays, and longer memoirs.
- Examine traditional and contemporary examples of memoir and personal essay writing from a diverse range of cultures to analyze how professional writers compose effective fiction
- Recognize the role of various techniques in the composition of memoir and personal essays and how professional writers employ them.
- Analyze craft elements specific to memoir and personal essays, including characterization, point of view, tone, setting, figurative language, dialogue, stream-of-consciousness, and traditional and experimental plot structure and apply these into their own compositions.
- Develop a process for conceiving, drafting, and revising short personal essays that demonstrate compelling content and voice, and familiarity with the elements of the genre.
- Work with peers in a workshop setting, learning how to identify strengths to improve specific elements of memoir and personal essays as well as methods for receiving and delivering effective constructive critique, with the goal of improving one's own creative development.
- Conduct research into the subjects of their writing and/or into the work and lives of memoirists and essayists.

University Policies and Syllabus Statements:

Diversity and Inclusive Education Syllabus Statement:

This course welcomes students from all backgrounds, experiences and perspectives. In accordance with the City Tech and CUNY missions, this course intends to provide an atmosphere of inclusion, respect, and the mutual appreciation of differences so that together we can create an environment in which all students can flourish. It is the instructor's goal to provide materials and activities that are welcoming and accommodating of diversity in all of its forms, including race, gender identity and presentation, ethnicity, national origin, religion, cultural identity, socioeconomic background, sexuality and sexual orientation, ability, neurodivergence, age, and etc. Your instructor is committed to equity and actively seeks ways to challenge institutional racism, sexism, ableism and other forms of prejudice. Your input is encouraged and appreciated. If a dynamic that you observe or experience in the course concerns you, you may respectfully inform your instructor without fear of how your concerns will affect your grade. Let your instructor know how to improve the effectiveness of the course for you personally, or for other students or student groups. We acknowledge that NYCCT is located on the traditional homelands of the Canarsie and Lenape peoples. Though we are not in a physical classroom, we are still a community. Respect for everyone in our course (not just the professor) is crucial.

Accessibility Statement:

City Tech is committed to supporting the educational goals of enrolled students with disabilities in the areas of enrollment, academic advisement, tutoring, assistive technologies, and testing accommodations. If you have or think you may have a disability, you may be eligible for reasonable accommodations or academic adjustments as provided under applicable federal, state and city laws. You may also request services for temporary conditions or medical issues under certain circumstances. If you have questions about your eligibility or would like to seek accommodation services or academic adjustments, you can leave a voicemail at 718-260-5143, send an email to Accessibility@citytech.cuny.edu, or visit the Center's website at <http://www.citytech.cuny.edu/accessibility/> for more information.

New York City College of Technology Policy on Academic Integrity:

Students and all others who work with information, ideas, texts, images, music, inventions, and other intellectual property owe their audience and sources accuracy and honesty in using, crediting, and citing sources. As a community of intellectual and professional workers, the College recognizes its responsibility for providing instruction in information literacy and academic integrity, offering models of good practice, and responding vigilantly and appropriately to infractions of academic integrity. Accordingly, academic dishonesty is prohibited in The City University of New York and at New York City College of Technology and is punishable by penalties, including failing grades, suspension, and expulsion. The complete text of the College policy on Academic Integrity may be found in the catalog.

Rationale: This course explores life writing as a means of expressing one's own experiences and truth. Memory is identity, and so it follows that writing personal essays enables one's identity to flourish, allows redress; such deep reflection can serve as a method to gain acceptance and present an immediate, humanized, authentic self. According to the New York Times, memoir writing can “make us legible, even relatable or ‘normal.’” Writing about one’s personal experiences has real-world application for career, personal growth, and well-being because it presents an authenticity that harnesses language to both experience and trust. This course is important to the department and the college as it is unique among course offerings at the College and is part of a developing Creative Writing minor.

PROPOSED CHANGES TO EXISTING COURSES

Overview

This section outlines changes to existing English course titles, numbers, and descriptions to more clearly show course progression within the Creative Writing academic minor.

- I. Course title and description: “ENG 1141: Creative Writing” will change to “ENG 1141: Introduction to Creative Writing” (with related course description changes)
- II. Course numbers:
 - A. “ENG 1142: Introduction to Poetry Writing” will change to “ENG 2142: Writing Poetry”
 - B. “ENG 1143: Writing for the Stage and Screen” will change to “ENG 2143: Writing for the Stage and Screen”
- III. Course descriptions: Descriptions for these courses will include the phrase “and creative responses”:
 - i. ENG 2001: Introduction to Literature | Fiction
 - ii. ENG 2002: Introduction to Literature | Drama
 - iii. ENG 2003: Introduction to Literature | Poetry
 - iv. ENG 3402: Topics in Literature
 - v. ENG 3403: One Major Writer

I. Changes to ENG 1141

Description of proposed change:

- a. This proposal is for a change in course name for this existing course offered by the English Department: “ENG 1141: Creative Writing” will change to “ENG 1141: Introduction to Creative Writing.”
- b. This proposal is also for a change in course description in the same course (see table below).
- c. ENG 1141 prerequisites will remain the same.
- d. If this proposal passes, the updated course catalog will read (changes identified in red font):

Existing Catalog Description	Proposed Catalog Description
ENG 1141: Creative Writing Pathways: Creative Expression Writing Intensive Techniques and skills in writing poetry, drama, the short story and the essay. Emphasis on the student's awareness of creative potential. Prerequisite: ENG 1101 or ENG 1101 CO or ENG 1101 ML	ENG 1141: Introduction to Creative Writing Pathways: Creative Expression Writing Intensive Introductory techniques and skills in writing poetry, drama, the short story and the essay. Emphasis on the student's awareness of creative potential. Foundation course for the Academic Minor in Creative Writing.

	Prerequisite: ENG 1101 or ENG 1101 CO or ENG 1101 ML

Rationale for proposed change:

As genre-oriented creative writing courses (i.e. courses in poetry and script writing, along with proposed courses in fiction and nonfiction) have been added since the creation of this course in 2007, the original title, “Creative Writing,” has become less clear.

Formally changing this course title and description will clarify the role of this course as an introductory, foundational survey course in the progression for the new Academic Minor in Creative Writing.

II. Changes to ENG 1142 and ENG 1143

Description of proposed change:

- a. This proposal is for a change in course title and course numbers for the following courses which currently exist in the English Department’s course listings:

Existing Course Number/Title	Proposed Course Number/Title
ENG 1142: Introduction to Poetry Writing	ENG 2142: Writing Poetry
ENG 1143: Writing for the Stage and Screen	ENG 2143: Writing for the Stage and Screen

- b. The course objectives, course prerequisites, objectives, and catalog description of the courses will remain the same.
- c. If this proposal passes, the updated course catalog will read, with changes in red:

An introduction to writing dramatic stories for the stage and screen with a focus on creative processes and techniques associated with creating modern, conventional stories for theater and film. Covers developing scripts, creating story ideas, writing and formatting dramatic scenes, and pitching film and stage projects to peers. The course includes analyzing dramatic literature and engaging in research of dramatic texts, as well as studying methods and theory regarding act-based plays and films. Prereq: ENG 1101 or ENG 1101 CO or ENG 1101 ML	Prereq: ENG 1101 or ENG 1101 CO or ENG 1101 ML

Rationale for proposed change:

Formally changing the course title “Introduction to Poetry Writing” to “Writing Poetry” will better convey to students and advisors that this genre-oriented Creative Writing course is more advanced, focused, and critical in terms of course content than the department’s foundational creative writing course, “Introduction to Creative Writing.”

(Additionally, the new course title, “Writing Poetry,” provides consistency with the new “Writing Fiction” and “Writing Nonfiction” courses outlined in this proposal.)

Formally changing the course numbers would be more consistent with literature courses currently offered at the 2000 level with the same course prerequisites—thus making the department’s offerings to students more consistent overall.

Finally, these updated course titles and course numbers will more clearly show course progression on the transcripts of students pursuing our Academic Minor in Creative Writing (see p. 8-9).

III. Changes to Additional Course Descriptions

Description of proposed change:

- a. This proposal is for a change in course descriptions for these existing courses offered by the English Department to include the phrase “and creative responses”:

- vi. ENG 2001-Introduction to Literature | Fiction
 - vii. ENG 2002-Introduction to Literature | Drama
 - viii. ENG 2003-Introduction to Literature | Poetry
 - ix. ENG 3402-Topics in Literature
 - x. ENG 3403-One Major Writer
- b. These course numbers, titles, and prerequisites will remain the same.
- c. If this proposal passes, the updated course catalog will read (changes identified in red font):

Rationale for proposed change: Formally changing these course descriptions will enable students interested in creative writing to apply that interest to literature courses, thus fostering understanding of how close reading and the study of literature is integral to deepening creative writing skills. Additionally, by highlighting new opportunities for creative writing and critical examination of authors' creative and craft choices, these changes provide clearer rationale for the optional inclusion of these courses in the curriculum path for the Creative Writing academic minor.

Effective Term	Spring 2015

Rationale:

Formally changing this course number and title would better convey to students and advisors that this genre-oriented Creative Writing course is more focused and critical in terms of course content than the department's foundational creative writing course: ENG 1141: Introduction to Creative Writing. The course title change provides consistency with new creative writing courses added for the department's proposed Academic Minor in Creative Writing.

Survey of Creative Writing Minor Programs at CUNY Colleges

Compiled Spring and Fall Semesters 2022
By Jennifer Sears-Pigliucci

Survey Overview

This survey reviews the availability of the creative writing minor at CUNY senior colleges for the purpose of developing a creative writing minor for students at New York City College of Technology. In presenting this information, we hope to highlight where and in what manner these opportunities are developed with the goal of better offering our own students equivalent opportunities and to better understand how we might shape our program to fit the needs of our students as they pursue majors specific to our college. Additionally, this survey highlights the equivalent to the Introduction to Fiction Writing and the Life Writing courses also submitted with the proposal for the Creative Writing Minor.

ENG 3610-Workshop: Fiction Writing (cross listed as JRN 3610)

Undergraduate | 3 Credits | 3 Hours

This workshop aids students to craft short stories out of their creative ideas. Early emphasis is placed on journal entries, in-class exercises, and sensory writing practice. Techniques of characterization, setting, description, dialogue, and pacing are discussed. The course includes in-class critiques, analyses of model fiction, and individual conferences. Students are encouraged to complete a publishable short story by semester's end. Not open to students who have completed ENG 2610. This course is equivalent to JRN 3610. Students will receive credit for either JRN 3610 or ENG 3610. These courses may not substitute for each other in the F grade replacement policy.
Prerequisite: ENG 2150

ENG 3685-Sudden Fiction-Crafting Short Stories (cross listed as JRN 36150)

Credit Hours: 3 Cr/3 Hours

This workshop introduces students to the art of writing "sudden" fiction -- short stories of less than 1,000 words. In addition to the basic elements of fiction, students will study symbolism, spare prose, selective omission and subtext as key devices of the genre. Students will read and analyze short fiction by writers including Raymond Carver, Grace Paley, Langston Hughes, Ernest Hemingway, Jamaica Kinkaid and Joyce Carol Oates. They will participate in group critique and feedback as they craft original short stories.
Prerequisite: ENG 2150

Intro. to Fiction Writing at John Jay (Two Levels)

Course Title: ENG 216 Fiction Writing (Credits/Hours: 3/3)

Course Description: Supervised practice in the writing of fiction, including popular fiction, with classroom analysis and discussion of student work. Strong emphasis on dialogue and characterization techniques. Depending on student interest, specific types of fiction may be considered, such as mystery novels, Gothic romances and science fiction.

Prerequisite: ENG 201 (Composition II)

Course Title: ENG 313 Advanced Fiction Writing (Credits/Hours: 3/3)

Course Description: Advanced Fiction Writing is a continuation of the 200-level Fiction Writing course and will be conducted as a writing workshop where students will read and critique each other's original stories. Students will study how to distinguish the choices professional writers make; that is, they will not only critique stories thematically but will gain insight into how a writer composes a work of fiction. Because many of the best contemporary stories are character-driven as opposed to plot-driven, and because student writers should master the more conservative elements of fiction writing before proceeding to experimental forms, students will write character-driven, thematically resonant stories. After the workshops, where students will comment on their peers' work carefully and constructively, student writers will thoroughly revise their stories.

Prerequisite: ENG 201(Composition II) and ENG 216 (Intro to Fiction Writing).

Course Offerings in Fiction Writing:

Intro to Fiction Writing at Medgar Evers College (3 Levels)

ENG 301 Fiction Writing I (Credits/Hours: 3/3)

Course Description: This course is the first part of the Fiction Writing sequence. Students will learn the craft of writing fiction with specific emphasis on character description and development, perspective, distance and point of view, dialogue, plot, and setting. Students will analyze these elements of fiction in the work of published authors. They will write exercises that emphasize these elements, culminating in a short story or excerpt of a novel that will effectively give expression to their values and visions. They will revise their work based on peer critique and the editorial guidance of the instructor. Prerequisite: ENGL 150 College Composition II

ENG 302-Fiction Writing II (Credits/Hours: 3/3)

Course Description: This course is the second part of the Fiction Writing sequence. It is designed to help students develop and strengthen their sense of literary aesthetics. Students will continue to learn the craft of writing fiction by examining the work of published authors and by revising their work with the guidance of peer critique and the editorial advice of the instructor. Students will be expected to discuss each assigned reading, including readings of work written by their peers, paying particular attention to the elements of fiction and style, the writer's use of language, and the vision and values evident in a work. Prerequisite: ENGL 150 and ENGL 301

ENGL 305-Fiction Writing Workshop (Credits/Hours: 3/3)

Course Description: This course is the third and final part of the Fiction Writing sequence. It is a writing workshop course that will be almost entirely directed by students. Students will be responsible for selecting works of fiction to be discussed by the class and will lead the discussions, analyzing character description and development, dialogue, point of view, plot, setting, language and style, theme and premise. Students will also be responsible for analyzing each other's work according to guidelines set by instructor. They will revise their work based on peer and instructor guidance. Conclusion on Survey Findings

Of the ten CUNY colleges included in this survey, eight offer students the option to pursue a Creative Writing Minor or a similar concentration in creative writing: Brooklyn College, City College, Hunter College, John Jay College, Lehman College, Medgar Evers College, Queens College, and York College. Courses equivalent to our proposed Introduction to Fiction Writing courses are offered at nine out of ten colleges, with five of these offering more than one level of advanced fiction writing. As we all know, the lives of departments and courses (and URLs) are ever-changing. The results shown in this report were reviewed in October 2022.

Student Interest Survey Results: Creative Writing

Compiled Summer 2020 - Fall 2022 by Jennifer Sears-Pigliucci and Daniel Ryan

Should City Tech offer a minor in Creative Writing?

Do you think students at City Tech should be given the opportunity to pursue Creative Writing as an academic minor in addition to their major degree?

Student comments:

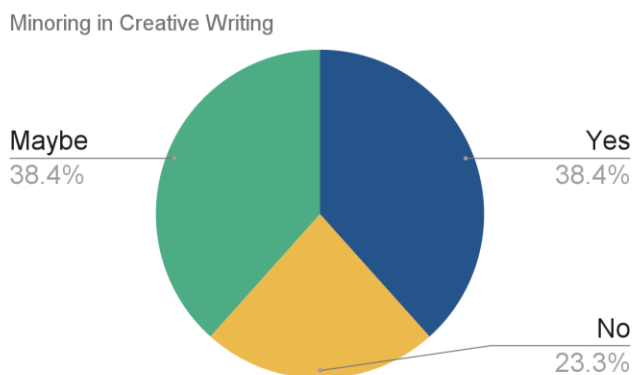

It would be a great way for students to get exposed to different writing which then can allow them to develop stronger and better writing skills.

Creative writing courses give a chance at something different for students. Most classes are all the same ... Having the option for students to take a break outside of that is amazing. This will get the students to really express themselves and will get them to tap into their creativity a lot more.

A lot of STEM majors tend to be creatively inclined but because they go to STEM equipped schools there is often no place to grow that side of their interests while pursuing their major. I believe that making a creative writing minor could help with that expression.

Would you minor in Creative Writing?

Would you pursue Creative Writing as an academic minor in addition to your major degree?

Student comments:

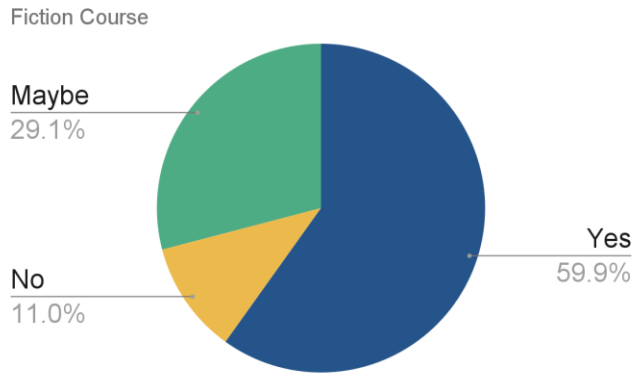

I am all for a creative writing minor since I am taking a creative writing class at the moment and I have discovered how much I really enjoy creative writing.

I believe creative writing would improve the brainstorming and problem solving aspects a career in general would require.

It is important to be able to read, write, and analyze pieces of literature and make connections between literature and real life.

Would you take “Introduction to Fiction Writing?”

To fulfill your GenEd/Major requirement, would you consider taking a 3-credit fiction writing and workshop course exploring the technique and traditions of fiction writing—including graphic novels and science fiction options?

Student comments:

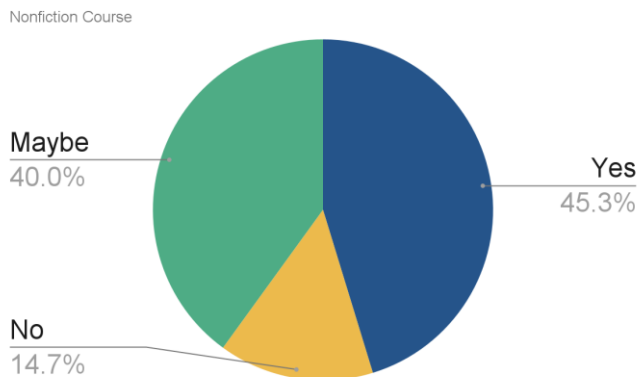

I think this course would be a great opportunity to strengthen my writing skills and creativity.

This course might help me or other students to be more prepared, such as in brainstorming, and encourage students to be more active in class.

I love fiction writing ... It has given me confidence and allowed me to develop as a writer.

Would you take “Creative Nonfiction: Life Writing and Identity?”

To fulfill your GenEd/Major requirement, would you consider taking a 3-credit memoir writing and workshop course exploring the technique and traditions of memoir writing.

Student comments:

I would love to be part of the program if there is a non-fiction writing part of the course.

I love writing and I would love to learn more techniques.

The memoir writing course interests me the most because I have considered writing my own memoir.

Statements of Support

I strongly support your proposal for an Academic Minor in Creative Writing.

I am convinced that this minor is truly beneficial for the Applied Computational Physics BS major students as well for all students of City Tech.

Eager to hear about the success of your Program.

All best wishes,
German Kolmakov
Physics dept, Chair.

Congratulations on preparing a well thought out minor, I look forward to advising students about this option. We actually have one student at the moment who I was told “is an exceptional writer and creative too.”

There have been times when I have worked with students to design a CUNYBA focused on communication and writing in food and travel. The addition of a minor in creative writing will provide students with the structure needed to remain right here at City Tech. I believe this will prove as a point of difference for students seeking a hospitality education.

Karen Goodlad, CSW
Associate Professor, Chairperson
Department of Hospitality Management

The Humanities department’s position remains unchanged: we strongly support the addition of this option to our (largely) STEM-focused student body’s current range of choices. Helping our students find their voice and providing them with the tools to reach their intended audience will empower our graduates no matter where they are headed. Teaching them to take pleasure in any creative effort will also enrich their lives—and a well-rounded education should surely do that.

All best,
Ann

This letter is written in support of the academic minor in Creative Writing proposed by the English Department. Our faculty met on February 6, 2023, and unanimously voted in favor.

The faculty in the Department of African American Studies appreciates the goal of this minor, which is to offer “students the opportunity for self-examination, craft-focused study in a variety of writing genres to sharpen critical writing and reading abilities, as well as a means to develop creative problem-solving skills as they pursue creative work within the larger context of academic study.” In the Department of African American Studies, these concepts are thoroughly explored in our courses as well, and support the idea of them being fully explored in an academic minor. We believe that these should be guiding principles of the educational experience, and therefore, support the idea of having an academic minor in Creative Writing that encapsulates these important values.
