Where I Come From?

In 2012, I graduated from Monroe College with a A.A.S Degree in Hospitality Management. The last internship that I was selected for during this time was at a place called Wholesome Goodness Market, and although I did a significant amount of administrative business work. The owner desperately needed a graphic designer to redesign her menus, business cards, packaging labels, and so forth.

After spending hours and hours redesigning her assets, I was interested in graphic design and decided to make in it an academic career choice, earning my A.A.S degree in Digital Design at Bronx Community College.

My Previous Work

Autopia, made for an online client, was inspired by the periodic chemistry symbol for gold which is scientifically abbreviated as AU.

Eric Gill United Kingdom
Born: Brighton, 1882
Died: Uxbridge, 1940

An English sculptor, sign painter, type designer, wannabe social reformer, devout Catholic with unusual sexual behavior (pedophile). His best known type designs were produced by the Monotype corporation, although he also designed type for private presses. His most widely used type Gill Sans, strongly influenced by the London Transport lettering of his teacher Edward Johnston, was the first successful sans type based on the humanist models of the Renaissance. Other of his designs are the intricate Perpetua and Joanna, named after his daughter.

John Baskerville United Kingdom. Born: Wolverley, Worcestershire, 1706 Died: Birmingham, 1775

English writing master, stonecutter, letter designer, typefounder and printer. Although in his lifetime he was under appreciated compared with his close contemporary William Caslon, he is now recognized as the other half of the duo that transformed English printing and type founding. His font Baskerville stands as the classic example of the transitional font; a beautiful font with serifs thinner than old style fonts like Garamond and Caslon but thicker than Didot and Bodoni. He was much admired, notably by Fournier, Bodoni and Benjamin Franklin. The modern revival of Baskerville's designs began in the 1920s, championed by Bruce Rogers. Where am I Now in 2019?

Freelancing & Internships

I am a freelance and junior graphic designer who thoroughly enjoys and specializes in logo design and identity branding, as well as editorial design for print, digital, and web. Over the course of my studies and my experiences as a junior graphic designer in New York City. I have obtained a comprehensive understanding of communication design accompanied with the technical aspects in a wide variety of design practices such as: the adobe creative cloud suite, print production, grid and format construction, the anatomy of typography, in addition to many other design practices.
