

Danielle Daniel-Ramsey

Professor Woods

February 5, 2021

Blog #1

It's the execution for me when it comes to a group project. I'm the type of team member who shows up and puts in their best effort to receive the best results. Since projects are usually a group effort at this institution, I never have a problem helping my group members if there is confusion. This way we get through the assignment faster. Recently I worked on a few group projects where I did a good amount of the research to establish what the future trends of weddings dresses would be in the spring of 2022. I also did plenty of research for my international retailing group project. I'm good at writing in APA format, doing research and finding necessary information to support my given task. I, Danielle am the group member you can count on to complete my assigned task in a timely fashion. I'm always open to listening to other group member's ideas for consideration. I care about making the best decisions as a group to get the best results for this assignment.