A “Drop Cap” is an initial letter of a paragraph. Usually embedded within text

Careful. Space after initial cap and what is the initial word.

As a restaurant near my school, which is a very good restaurant for me because of their service and cleanest. The first time I went was with my school pierce we didn't know where to go to eat, and we found that place which we all have heard of it but never been there, so we decided to go inside and see their menu, and try out their food, well the first and I think the only bad thing they have is that their food is expensive, but is worth it, because the quality of their food is worth the money that it costs.

The next thing is which is awesome is that you can see them cooking your food something that when it comes to fast food is incredible, because people sometimes doesn't like fast food because the restaurants that sell them sometimes don't do their jobs right, like cooking the meat right, and you can not see how they cook your food, etc. Here in five guys you can see the whole process of your food from the beginning until it gets to your hands which is something great, I really

A text transition is a few words that are set differently than regular body copy and follow the initial cap
