

Mock interview reflection

The mock interview was a very helpful exercise for me because I was able to really feel like I was getting interviewed, and it felt like I was actually interviewing an interviewee which I found truly beneficial. I was able to be on both sides of the interview, from the interviewer to the interviewee, which made me experience how and interview goes down. The mock interview made me realize that I have to work on my speech skills, and it taught me how to answer some really important questions that I might encounter in a real life interview. I was able to answer and ask questions and I was able to give and receive advice from my team members during the mock interview. I was able to get feedback on my performance which I find really helpful and important because I can work on my weakness and see where I need to improve in for future reference. The mock interview was an opportunity for me to test myself and see how well or how ready I actually am for an interview and it made me realize I still have much more preparation to do.
