✓ The American Dream ^{includes} freedom, equality, and opportunities to achieve personal goals. Many have immigrated to America to achieve this with one thought in their mind, success. I believe and higher education can help one attain this goal, it is one of the most important factors that plays a huge part in one's success. In Frank Bruni's article, "College's Priceless Value", he brings up controversies that are very much debatable. ~~controversies~~ Should one receive education as a form of career training for a specific job, or should one be educated with ~~an array of~~ subjects ~~and knowledge to career fields~~, varying from poetry to molecular engineering? I would choose to agree with Bruni's statement of receiving a more broader form of education ~~addressed many topics to support his idea~~ without putting a price tag on it. He addresses many topics that support his idea which are, the view on undergraduate institutions as ~~trade schools~~, the importance of diverse subjects, and college being a ~~transformative~~ experience. (3)

✓ Some ^{of our countries} leaders view ~~undergraduate institutions to be used as trade schools.~~ Bruni quotes "Scott Walker's 13% cut in state support for the University of Wisconsin." Should we have that kind of view on a place where people go to learn? I believe this is a short-cut to push people in to the workforce without much educational enrichment.

this can create many adverse effects on the society overall. ~~advers~~ Our goals are supposed to be reached in a different way ~~by~~ adding diverse subjects in our learning path.

The importance of diverse subjects on overall education has a great impact on one's learning. "... college isn't just about making better engineers but about making better citizens..." I completely agree with this quote and my views on education can relate to this well. When I first began college I had a specific goal and that was to be a dental hygienist. ~~Before~~ ~~decided~~ I decided to take a variety of classes ranging from ~~to~~ poetry to astronomy before entering the program to get a better understanding of college. I made a great decision by doing this because I find myself enjoying it very much. There is so much to learn in the world and by dabbling at everything, I began to view the world differently, feeling myself change as a person overall. Studying Shakespeare and Ralph Waldo Emerson ~~can~~ have a great impact on one's life intellectually. I believe keeping education diverse overall is a great thing to do.

College should also be a transformative experience. Bruni writes "... but it was also the steppingstone to a more aware, thoughtful existence." College is a new world for most seniors graduating from High school. It is where you can transform yourself to anyone you want and by learning, studying, and the overall experience should guide you to where you want to be. College is where you can find ~~good people~~ answers to many questions and that in turn can transform you in the long run.

Overall, Bruni writes a thought-full essay and touching on these three topics; tradeschool, diverse subjects, and transformative experience helped me understand and become more agreeing to his ideas. College is the gateway to one's life's success, happiness and prosperity. and there should not be a price tag to it.
