

Brooklyn Bridge Park Reflection

During the visit to the Brooklyn Bridge park, I was not expecting to listen to all the history of that area. For example, slavery could've possibly occur there, bringing on goods to the city. What impressed me the most was that the A train passes right underneath the waterfall of Brooklyn. After walking around the waterfall, we went to the "Brooklyn Roast Company" where we learned more about coffee and how the owner build his way up to where he is now. He mentioned how if he didn't tale the opportunity offered to him, he wouldn't be in the place he is in today. It was a really chilly day but we made it through.
