Hate on towards each other.

Today we live in a world that we can automatically turn on a race for something that wasn't their fault to begin with such as Asian American being targeted for assuming they are Chinese for cause the outbreak of the COVID-19 by assaulting the elderly down to the street, robbing from Asian markets, calling them names. Meanwhile you have people in the internet trying piggyback on canceling someone for not agreeing with their view just to be either misunderstanding the situation, not getting the full side of both stories, just want to gain more social presence on internet to get clout. These are the things that disgusted me during this generation that I hope really change for the better.

Growing up in Queens, a place filled with diversity, especially Jackson Heights, I fell in love with Asian culture and food. As a young kid my parents used to take me to a family-owned Chinese restaurant that my parents fell in love with their food and I did too that we built a close relationship with the restaurant owner where we instantly recognized once arriving in the restaurant this connection helped me understand to be more open and understand around the people near me. It hurt me that Asian Americans are being mistaken as Chinese American by ignorance of that person for not understanding there are other Asian races other than Chinese. I threw the line about a week ago when an Asian American mom in Flushing a place majority Chinese neighborhood was push to the ground where there was a pile of snow next to a pole and has to get 10 stitches on her head, then you got nypd later not calling a this hate crime but a assault just really doesn't sit well with me . I really hope in the future people just open their eyes and see that not all asian American are Chinese and being ignorant.

Another issue I wanted to talk about is canceling culture on the internet, how it really hurts me to say that it is a disgusting thing to do and it gives the majority of toxic people more power. People who are part of cancel culture really to don't see both side of the story but they rather pick the side of victim instead for example I remember early on in amber heard and johnny Depp case people were siding with amber heard because was playing the role of the victim saying Johnny had abuse her that got him fired from Warner Brothers studio from Harry Potter project and Disney to lose his main role as captain sparrow in the pirate of the Caribbean, but later you find out that she was abuser in the relationship by the evidence johnny Depp has gather of her including a statement from the bodyguard. Unlike Johnny Depp, we got fired from all his projects. You have Amber Heard still got to keep her job. How is this even fair for Amber heard to be the abuser to keep her job but it was Johnny Depp to be the abuser he lost of his upcoming project that he was working on. I really hope down in a few years canceling culture loses it power.
