Textbooks

The required textbook for this course is The History of Modern Fashion from 1850 by Daniel James Cole and Nancy Deihl (London: Laurence King Publishing, 2015). This book must be purchased or borrowed from a library, we will be reading the entire book over the course of the semester. There are both e-book and print versions available. The recommended textbook is Fashion by Christopher Breward (Oxford University Press, 2003) as several chapters will be assigned for supplementary reading. All other readings for the course will be uploaded to Blackboard. The other books that we will be reading from are Fashion History: A Global View by Linda Welters and Abby Lillethun (New York: Bloomsbury, 2018); The Peacock Revolution: American Masculine Identity and Dress in the Sixties and Seventies by Daniel Delis Hill (New York: Bloomsbury, 2018); and The Dress Detective by Ingrid Mida and Alexandra Kim (New York: Bloomsbury, 2015).

Supplementary Reading

In addition to the assigned texts, supplementary readings and other materials will be posted on Blackboard. These optional materials will provide additional detail or different perspectives on course concepts. Current news about the fashion industry that is relevant to our course will also be posted as supplementary reading. These readings may be discussed during class sessions as well.

Class Participation

Students are expected to attend all scheduled class sessions, and be fully present and engaged during each session. During class sessions, students will engage in activities that demonstrate participation, such as contributing to class discussions and small groups discussions with comments and questions, writing short journal entries, and engaging in class activities like polls and quizzes. Journals are designed to develop critical thinking skills related to fashion issues and will be assessed on the depth of the student's engagement with the prompt. Class discussion is a central element in this course, and students must demonstrate engagement in the class sessions in order to receive a full class participation grade. Note that quality of engagement is most important: students should be active listeners and work to move the discussion forward and deepen the understanding of course concepts. Contributions that are insubstantial or unrelated will not be considered as engagement.

Course Conduct

All students in this class are expected to be respectful of their peers and instructor during lectures, discussion sessions and when working collaboratively in groups. Disrespectful comments or behavior will not be tolerated, and the instructor may remove a student from a class session if they make any such comments or demonstrate any such behavior.

Assignments (Full prompts will be posted on Blackboard; refer to these for detailed instructions)

Research Paper: The final assignment will be a 5 page term paper where you will choose a primary historical source, such as a garment, photograph, illustration, or painting, and use secondary sources and your own analysis to discuss the social, cultural and historical context that influenced the fashionable dress you've selected. You will present your research to the class. Selecting an appropriate primary source and submitting an annotated bibliography with the academic sources you will use is a part of the research paper assignment and the overall grade.

Museum or Documentary Response Paper: A list of current museum exhibits and recent documentary films related to fashion history will be provided; after visiting or viewing, you will write a 2 page response paper about the exhibit or film, considering it in the context of main course concepts.

Fashion in Film Project: You will be paired with peers for this project, and will be assigned to watch a film from a time period that we are studying, then to analyze the dress in that film. The project is comprised of a presentation and a written paper, which students will complete as a peer group.

Garment Analysis Paper: In this assignment, you will be analyzing a piece of clothing from your own wardrobe using the research methodologies of a fashion historian, according to the outline we will discuss in class. You'll be considering what this garment could tell a researcher about the time in which it was made, who made it, the person who may have worn it, and what it may have symbolized or signaled. Write a 2 page analysis paper outlining your analysis and speculating what a researcher might learn from this garment if it was a historical source.

Examinations

There will be a final exam given on the last class session which will assess your knowledge of vocabulary, style of silhouette, knowledge of designers, technological developments, and socio-historical context for the time periods covered in the course. The exam will consist of essay questions, short answers, multiple choice and other question forms where students can demonstrate their knowledge and understanding of fashion history in social and cultural context. Practice quizzes may also be given, to prepare students for the type of questions they can expect on the graded exam.

COURSE POLICIES AND PROCEDURESGUIDELINES FOR WRITTEN ASSIGNMENTS:

All papers must be typed. A page is the equivalent of a double-spaced 8.5 x 11-inch paper with one-inch margins using 12- point type. Follow the page length guidelines for each assignment and number each page. All work should contain the student's name and email address, the course name, number and section, and the name of the assignment.

Effective writing helps clarify ideas and communicate those ideas to others. Be organized, clear, and succinct. Grammar, punctuation, style, and spelling are important. Write in college-level American English that is appropriate to the business community. You are encouraged to use the resources of the University Writing Center.

Papers will be graded on the following criteria:

- Clear and thorough application of course concepts and principles (including material covered in the assigned reading, lectures, and discussions).
- Demonstration of original, logical, strategic thinking including a complete analysis of facts. Specific historical examples should support the analysis, and be appropriately supported with academically sound sources. Address the requirements of the assignment.
- Quality of research (depth, breadth, appropriateness) and proper acknowledgement of references, including complete citations using APA style in-text notes, when appropriate.
- Appropriate language and tone, accurate spelling, correct grammar, appropriate punctuation, and logical organization.

Please plan accordingly for all your assignment due dates. In a case of an emergency, reach out to your professor to discuss the possibility of adjusted assignment due dates.
