

Halva

Ia Macharashvili

Where does this item come from?

Western Asia, Central and South Asia, the Balkans, the Caucasus, Eastern Europe, Malta, North Africa, and the Horn of Africa are all known for their halva.

Although many people assume halva came from India, specialists like as Alan Davidson of The Oxford Companion to Food believe it was invented in the Middle East. The term "halva" originates from the Arabic word "hulw," which means "sweet."

Interesting facts

While many people think of halva as a dessert or a treat, it is really one of the world's oldest dietary supplements. Halva is most often prepared using nuts, however flour-based halva is also available . Halva was traditionally prepared with dates and milk or sesame seeds and honey. Today, it's commonly prepared with sugar syrup and crushed sesame or sunflower seeds, with tastes like cocoa powder, vanilla, various nuts, or even dried fruits. Sesame seed-based halva is high in essential minerals.
