Re: Restaurant Review - Red Hook Tavern

Last week's review focused on a restaurant that illustrates the essence of the current New York City. This week the wheel has turned to Red Hook Tavern, a restaurant that has the New York signature burger title located in the "old New York". Red Hook Tavern is a combination of a pub and a burger place. Their style of burger is well put together to create a delicious heaven to the tongue. It is more than piling up the ingredients to make a burger, it is also plating it like a fine-dining restaurant experience. However, their drinks are what draw their customers for their reservations.

I would go to this restaurant with my friends once I am legal. This sounds like the place where it is perfect for a short gather right after work to catch up with friends. It is not easy for people to find a good atmosphere to enjoy themselves after long hours of work.
