Hi Tina,

I am going to resubmit the application for designation of SOC 2401 as an ID course and wanted to check if you could reconfirm your interest and availability to do two guest lectures in this course.

Ideally, the lectures would be on "Technologies and the Neurobiological Foundations of Learning" (focuses on biological foundations of interactions with technologies) and "Neuroscience and Behavior" (focuses on identity from a neuroscientific perspective).

Please let me know if you have any questions.

All the best,

Diana

Sure! When you have the chace, please elaborate a bit more about what you mean by "identity making" so my lectures can be more in context and impactful!

Subject: SOC 2401 guest lectures

Hi Tina,

I am preparing a proposal to designate SOC 2401: Society, Technology and Self as an interdisciplinary course. The course focuses on technologies as sites of social interaction and self-identification. Given your background in psychology and neuroscience, it would be wonderful if you could give two guest lectures on psychological and biological foundations of identity-making processes.

Please let me know if you are interested and available to share your expertise in this class.

Thank you,
Diana
