Hi Amanda,

That's truly fine. I think it's great that you and Susan are going to teach the course. I worked with her on the academic integrity committee years ago. I'm sure that you'll enjoy working with her as much as I did.

Best,

Pete

Hi Pete-

Thanks for emailing me. Sorry to have missed you, I wanted to chat briefly, but am happy to email it, so that you might consider.

It's about teaching a Special Topics ID (Learning Places: Exploring New York City) course that I worked on adopting last Spring, to be offered this Spring (2019). It was a paid workshop in which faculty modified an existing ID course to fit their expertise.

It's a Library/Architecture class, that is to be taught by myself and Susan Phillip from the Hospitality department. It had not occurred to me that while we are fulfilling the role of teaching this Special Topics course (Bonne put a call out of professors to do this last Fall), it is not listed in our department. It seems rather obvious now. That being said, I am going to reach out to the Library faculty as advised by the IDC, as they are the one's who've scheduled this in the past.

In hindsight, I really should've consulted with you on this matter, as Chair of the department. So I am bringing this to your attention now. I appreciate your input, approval, and noting any setbacks (if you see any). Geoff and Diana are doing the very same course adoption and teaching an ECSI course in the Spring as well. (except, they likely consulted with you long before I realized it). Again, thank you for your patience in me bringing this matter up to you--- it truly had slipped my mind when going through all the motions, over the last year, to make this course possible.

Thanks again, and enjoy your weekend!

-Amanda

Hi Amanda,

Our appointments committee meeting today lasted longer than I expected it to, and then I had to leave for an appointment in Manhattan. We can meet on Monday if you like.

Best,

Pete
