

LEARNING SELF-ANALYSIS

Janibel Corona Lopez, November 26, 2018.

Throughout my nursing academic career I've learned the importance of self reflection. It is in the spirit of self reflection that I look at my time in the BSN program and analyze what I've learned.

Throughout the various courses, such as Professional Nursing Practice, I've acquired skills needed to seek out and analyze information imperative for my nursing practice. I've learned of the importance for advocacy within the profession and how crucial it is to be a productive part of the interdisciplinary team. All of this is part of administering high quality patient care, across all levels of nursing.

My BSN education has shown me how significant it is to reorganize ones values and prioritize ethics. This sets a self-implemented standard for my practice.

Finally, I've grasped the importance of considering different perspectives when collaborating with patients, nurses, and other professionals.
