

Based on what I've done in my internship, I feel my experience and skills have improved each day. I noticed the amount of work and effort I put into my design, not for the company but to refine my design process. An example can be the amount of revisions I created for the menu boards. I wanted the design to be attractive to the guests and appeal to them to buy more products.

Another factor in my growth was my understanding and skills in negotiation in a new job. As I worked throughout my internship, a manager from the marketing department caught eye on me from one of the meetings with the Oculus Beer Garden. She approached me through email and a brief zoom meeting of what the job position offers. After a few other interviews and negotiations, they offered me the full-time position.
