Hello Má Pêche Dine Around Companions!

What a lovely evening. Thank you for coming out this evening!

A special thank you to Professor Jason Montgomery for schooling us on the complex social, political, historical, cultural, and emotional facets of urban housing developments from the middle of last century. When I think about the thinking, planning, etc., that has gone into these places, so near to me geographically, I realize just how staggeringly naive I am to these "every day" complexities.

I appreciated Norman Kohn's quip upon our being "bounced" from our lecture space, as the degree to which that space was in fact "public," given that this was clearly contested by our inhospitable host!

Stay warm, and enjoy the meetings!

Your (somewhat discombobulated) dine around organizer!

Brenda

P.S. Reach out at any time for restaurant suggestions, or scientific program recommendations.
