Other comments to the author or reviewers:

The paper engages with debate in New York City around the construction of housing on land, identifying various angles and criticisms from all parties. It thus underlines the issue of complexity and the way in which any single decision affecting the built environment is subject to contestation as a result.

The author identifies that he/she will discuss a case study of "integrative development" that seems to attempt to reconcile a number of these complexities. This will be the core argument of the paper and I assume will be the main focus of the presentation.
