Creative Writing

At the end of this semester I learned how to improve my writing skills with an creative writing course that taught me various techniques that I can take and use in the real world such as how to properly form a professional resume to learning the do's and don'ts of an interview. All of these class ideas and assignments with help me grow personally and professionally and will help me as i progress in life.

Since my major is Graphic Arts I decided to do a before and after of me learning my skills as an Graphic Designer with a design i had to do when I first started versus my abilities now. Before I didn't pay attention to details and colors and when I used photoshop everything was just cut out and placed. I then learned that when you get out in the real world and your doing a design for someone and getting paid for your expertise that you cant do half ass work. You have to learn all aspects of designing such as color schemes,shadowing,effects to make your design the best. The graphic design field is very competitive and you have to be on top on your "A" game when going into this field because it will be that one person that knows one minor thing that you don't know that they do that will land them the job.

Below is two postcards I did (Then And Now) The top one was done with not much thought. I used a horrible gradient that blended in with Chris Browns name because I used a gradient on his name as well, everybody is cut out with no shadows which makes me really look like they were cardboard cutouts. But the other post card I did had a focus, color scheme and shadows where They Needed it to be (under the headphones). It looks a lot more professional than the previous one. Like I stated before you have to take into consideration you have a client to satisfy and a rep to uphold and improve. When you take time to and practice your skills you will go far in your career.
