

heard "You sound like a white girl when you talk," or "If you were really black, you would know do that." What people fail to realize is a world with generic, carbon copies of each other lack originality, personality and individuality. ^{this is} a world I can't belong to. I dare not attempt to fill any of ^{the} these negative molds crafted by society. Do other great women inspire me? Indeed, but my future is not to be the next ^{of any of} them, but rather, the first ever me, Keeozel Saul. Am I wrong for wanting to be an individual? Of course not, ^{to the} like all human beings, I too am flawed. In a society that profits from your self-doubt, liking yourself is a rebellious act.

⊗ Expand on Pri's Subtopic paragraph

⊗ Excellent Point!

⊗ Why do you say that you're flawed?

⊗ Start Conclusion #

