According to reporter Adam Howard, the poem, which references the deaths of unarmed African-Americans like Sandra Bland, Trayvon Martin and Eric Garner, will appear on the inaugural broadcast of the National Action Network's 2015 Triumph Awards, which will be headlined by MSNBC host Rev. Al Sharpton. One commenter went on to say to T.I. "T.I. if Black Lives Matter then speak to your hip hop rappers about the music and culture that is destroying the black community. Speak to Lil Wayne and others who degrade women in their so called art."
