Summary of "Lenox Avenue Midnight"

The poem, "Lenox Avenue: Midnight" by Langston Hughes addresses the struggles and retreat of life. Langston Hughes describes this as "The rhythm of life", the ups and downs. Some people see deep poetry when it's being spoken as something crazy, he expresses this by saying "The gods are laughing at us." How can something as sweet as honey also feel like broken heart and the swish of rain? Using musical terms to push how strong these moods were.
