

NEW YORK CITY COLLEGE OF TECHNOLOGY
The City University of New York
Department of Nursing

It is a pleasure to write a letter of recommendation for, Lauren Seaquist, R.N., as she begins her nursing practice. I have had this former student in two difference programs at CUNY as she continues to pursue her education. She was a serious student who maintained an excellent GPA. She is caring, competent, and reliable in delivering nursing care to patients and their families. She is knowledgeable in acute care nursing; able to assess, plan, care, and evaluate patient care in various clinical arenas with multiple disciplines. She is team player and leader exhibiting her ability to engage others while being consistent and resilient in working relationships with patients, families, and other healthcare professionals. She is dedicated to assuring she performs in the most professional and knowledgeable manner; always self-directed, determined, responsible, and honest. She utilizes evidence-based practices in an engaging and professional manner. Her ability to communicate well both verbally and in writing, assume leadership roles, and evaluate client outcomes was evident as a student. Her scholarship as a student, now supported by practice, will allow her to be successful in future graduate studies. She is one of the outstanding students I have had the honor to teach over many courses. I wish her only the best as she will be an asset to patients, institutions, and our profession. If you need further information, I can be reached at kmarsala-cervasio @citytech.cuny.edu

Kindest regards,

Kathleen Marsala, Cervasio 10.04.19

Kathleen Cervasio PhD, EdD, ACNS-BC, RN
Adjunct Associate Professor
Associate Program and RN/BS Program