Re: Beyond the Capitalist Workplace: How the Production of Surplus across the Economy Keeps Producers Divided

Costas Panayotakis

Thu 2/4/2021 7:13 PM

To: Monica Berger < MBerger@citytech.cuny.edu >;

Great, thanks!

From: Monica Berger

Sent: Thursday, February 4, 2021 7:09:36 PM

To: Costas Panayotakis

Subject: Re: Beyond the Capitalist Workplace: How the Production of Surplus across the Economy Keeps

Producers Divided

yes!

Monica Berger
Associate Professor
Instruction and Scholarly Communications Librarian
Ursula C. Schwerin Library
New York City College of Technology, CUNY
300 Jay St.
Brooklyn, NY 11201-1909
718 260-5488
http://library.citytech.cuny.edu
mberger@citytech.cuny.edu

Increase the impact of your scholarship with Academic Works! Ask me how.

Keep up with news from us and follow @citytechlibrary on Instagram & Twitter

Have a question? Ask a Librarian 24/7!

From: Costas Panayotakis

Sent: Thursday, February 4, 2021 7:03:39 PM

To: Monica Berger

Subject: Re: Beyond the Capitalist Workplace: How the Production of Surplus across the Economy Keeps

Producers Divided

So, just to be clear, that means that the number of downloads in Academic works notifications is not the total number of all downloads of the article in all its versions (published as well as the version in Academic Works) but simply reflects the downloads of the version of the article posted on Academic Works. Is my understanding correct?

From: Monica Berger

Sent: Thursday, February 4, 2021 6:54:55 PM

To: Costas Panayotakis

Subject: Re: Beyond the Capitalist Workplace: How the Production of Surplus across the Economy Keeps

Producers Divided

Generally, most publishers generally don't supply you with downloads unless the article is open access. No, there's no data about usage on the publishers' sites and you'd need to get that from the publisher.

My new article has an altmetrics score which is chiefly measuring Twitter activity. Some of the major publishers do provide that measure.

Academic Works functions entirely separately from the publishers beyond the practice honoring their copyright and self-archiving policies and my needing to occasionally ask permission when there is no policy which is common for smaller publishers.

Monica Berger
Associate Professor
Instruction and Scholarly Communications Librarian
Ursula C. Schwerin Library
New York City College of Technology, CUNY
300 Jay St.
Brooklyn, NY 11201-1909
718 260-5488
http://library.citytech.cuny.edu
mberger@citytech.cuny.edu

Increase the impact of your scholarship with Academic Works! Ask me how. Keep up with news from us and follow @citytechlibrary on Instagram & Twitter Have a question? Ask a Librarian 24/7!

From: Costas Panayotakis

Sent: Thursday, February 4, 2021 6:47:32 PM

To: Monica Berger

Subject: Re: Beyond the Capitalist Workplace: How the Production of Surplus across the Economy Keeps

Producers Divided

But the downloads from the publisher's site, where one would have to pay, would not be included in the numbers send in the Academic Works notifications, right?

From: Monica Berger

Sent: Thursday, February 4, 2021 6:44:05 PM

To: Costas Panayotakis

Subject: Re: Beyond the Capitalist Workplace: How the Production of Surplus across the Economy Keeps

Producers Divided

hi Costas: I hope to post your work tomorrow. It usually takes me around 5-10 minutes per item not counting time to correspond and research policies for each case.

The notifications you get from Academic Works are strictly for content in it and not other articles. You have only the chapter with Sean, Insatiability and Crisis: Using Interdisciplinarity to Understand (and Denaturalize) Contemporary Humans

Yes, once the other articles go in, you'll get download metrics regularly. If the metrics are meaningful, I and others put that as additional evidence in our PARSE alongside citation metrics. For example, I wrote a conference paper but the publisher didn't provide good "discovery" for the papers and there's a fair number of downloads (1500-1600) for it via Academic Works.

Monica Berger
Associate Professor
Instruction and Scholarly Communications Librarian
Ursula C. Schwerin Library
New York City College of Technology, CUNY
300 Jay St.
Brooklyn, NY 11201-1909
718 260-5488
http://library.citytech.cuny.edu
mberger@citytech.cuny.edu

Increase the impact of your scholarship with Academic Works! Ask me how. Keep up with news from us and follow @citytechlibrary on Instagram & Twitter Have a question? Ask a Librarian 24/7!

From: Costas Panayotakis

Sent: Thursday, February 4, 2021 6:16:13 PM

To: Monica Berger

Subject: Re: Beyond the Capitalist Workplace: How the Production of Surplus across the Economy Keeps

Producers Divided

Sounds good. Thank you for guiding me through this. I submitted the form. What happens next? When will the articles be posted on CUNY Academic Works and how do I view them? By the way, this may also help clear another question I have had for a while. I regularly get this CUNY Academic Works notification email regarding downloads of my work and it seems that these downloads always pertain to a chapter I have in a volume edited by Reneta. Now I know that, according to the journals that published them, other articles of mine have been downloaded. Do the notifications I get from CUNY refer only to the articles included in CUNY

Academic Works? And does the inclusion of the articles I sent you mean that, in the future, CUNY Academic Works notifications would also include downloads of these journal articles?

From: Monica Berger

Sent: Thursday, February 4, 2021 5:18:10 PM

To: Costas Panayotakis

Subject: Re: Beyond the Capitalist Workplace: How the Production of Surplus across the Economy Keeps

Producers Divided

hi Costas: All larger, commercial publishers have policies that allow you the author to add your accepted manuscript to Academic Works.

In some cases, an author has to make their work open access or public access due to funder or institutional requirements (this is the norm in Europe and especially in the UK). The use of institutional repositories like Academic Works is huge in England.

Adding your work to Academic Works is called self-archiving or green open access. It is green because it is sustainable as opposed to paid immediate open access publishing or gold open access.

I assure you that you will not be violating any copyright agreements. That is specifically why I wouldn't add your published versions.

If you would like to do a brief meeting about this, I can go over it with you. Commercial publishers will address self-archiving in the standard copyright transfer agreement and if you can find them, I can take a look.

I've attached a contract for a recent article I published. Section C provides that self-archiving of the accepted manuscript is a permitted use.

Not every publisher puts that language into contracts but every mainstream publisher has language on their website related to self-archiving or green open access.

I hope this isn't too overwhelming but I presume you might find it interesting. best, Monica

Monica Berger
Associate Professor
Instruction and Scholarly Communications Librarian
Ursula C. Schwerin Library
New York City College of Technology, CUNY
300 Jay St.
Brooklyn, NY 11201-1909
718 260-5488
http://library.citytech.cuny.edu

mberger@citytech.cuny.edu

Increase the impact of your scholarship with Academic Works! Ask me how. Keep up with news from us and follow @citytechlibrary on Instagram & Twitter Have a question? Ask a Librarian 24/7!

From: Costas Panayotakis

Sent: Thursday, February 4, 2021 4:19:35 PM

To: Monica Berger

Subject: Re: Beyond the Capitalist Workplace: How the Production of Surplus across the Economy Keeps

Producers Divided

The form asks me to attest that I am not infringing any copyrights - if you can assure me that agreeing to the posting of the MS files I sent you does not infringe on any copyright (and does not therefore carry the risk of me not having my work considered by journals in the future), I will be happy to give permission and fill the form. I am asking you this because you clearly have a better understanding of the legal issues involved in these questions.

From: Monica Berger

Sent: Thursday, February 4, 2021 4:04:50 PM

To: Costas Panayotakis

Subject: Re: Beyond the Capitalist Workplace: How the Production of Surplus across the Economy Keeps

Producers Divided

Of course I'll add all the details pointing back to the published version and I do need permission to add these on your behalf.

Here's an example of what it looks like once the articles go in: https://academicworks.cuny.edu/ny_pubs/553/

Monica Berger Associate Professor Instruction and Scholarly Communications Librarian Ursula C. Schwerin Library New York City College of Technology, CUNY 300 Jay St. Brooklyn, NY 11201-1909 718 260-5488 http://library.citytech.cuny.edu

mberger@citytech.cuny.edu

Increase the impact of your scholarship with Academic Works! Ask me how. Keep up with news from us and follow @citytechlibrary on Instagram & Twitter Have a question? Ask a Librarian 24/7!

From: Costas Panayotakis

Sent: Thursday, February 4, 2021 3:16:23 PM

To: Monica Berger

Subject: Re: Beyond the Capitalist Workplace: How the Production of Surplus across the Economy Keeps

Producers Divided

I attach the MS Word versions of two of the articles. Would there be a notation on them, mentioning the journals they were published in?

From: Monica Berger

Sent: Thursday, February 4, 2021 3:09:03 PM

To: Costas Panayotakis

Subject: Re: Beyond the Capitalist Workplace: How the Production of Surplus across the Economy Keeps

Producers Divided

yes, exactly. It's a way to liberate scholarship from publisher paywalls. The philosophy of open access is that scholarship should be free to all to read.

Academic Works is a CUNY-wide platform where each college has its own section of Academic Works. The content in Academic Works is searchable by Google and Google Scholar and also indexed elsewhere.

Almost every college and university has a similar platform (institutional repository) even many in the Global South.

So yes, the idea is that your writing can be found freely without payment. However, most publishers will limit us to the version before copyediting because they want to continue to sell their "product." best, Monica

Monica Berger
Associate Professor
Instruction and Scholarly Communications Librarian
Ursula C. Schwerin Library
New York City College of Technology, CUNY
300 Jay St.
Brooklyn, NY 11201-1909
718 260-5488
http://library.citytech.cuny.edu
mberger@citytech.cuny.edu

Increase the impact of your scholarship with Academic Works! Ask me how. Keep up with news from us and follow @citytechlibrary on Instagram & Twitter Have a question? Ask a Librarian 24/7!

From: Costas Panayotakis

Sent: Thursday, February 4, 2021 2:52:56 PM

To: Monica Berger

Subject: Re: Beyond the Capitalist Workplace: How the Production of Surplus across the Economy Keeps

Producers Divided

So the idea is that someone who's interested in one of my articles would know to turn to the City Tech library for a free MS word version?

From: Monica Berger

Sent: Thursday, February 4, 2021 2:17:54 PM

To: Costas Panayotakis

Subject: Re: Beyond the Capitalist Workplace: How the Production of Surplus across the Economy Keeps

Producers Divided

hi Costas: these are all published articles. Publishers with some exceptions don't allow their published articles to be made open or public access since they are businesses selling journals and need subscription fees from libraries and other institutions.

So any version, theoretically in MSWord, before proofs will work. The accepted manuscript also known as the author accepted manuscript is typically the version after peer review is done and the journal formally accepts your draft. So, anything without the publisher's markings on it ... best, Monica

Monica Berger Associate Professor Instruction and Scholarly Communications Librarian Ursula C. Schwerin Library New York City College of Technology, CUNY 300 Jay St. Brooklyn, NY 11201-1909 718 260-5488 http://library.citytech.cuny.edu

mberger@citytech.cuny.edu

Increase the impact of your scholarship with Academic Works! Ask me how. Keep up with news from us and follow @citytechlibrary on Instagram & Twitter Have a question? Ask a Librarian 24/7!

From: Costas Panayotakis

Sent: Thursday, February 4, 2021 1:05:46 PM

To: Monica Berger

Subject: Re: Beyond the Capitalist Workplace: How the Production of Surplus across the Economy Keeps Producers Divided

I attach another one. Let me know if any of the three pdf's I sent to you are suitable for your purposes.

Best, Costas

From: Monica Berger

Sent: Thursday, February 4, 2021 11:01:20 AM

To: Costas Panayotakis

Subject: Re: Beyond the Capitalist Workplace: How the Production of Surplus across the Economy Keeps

Producers Divided

hi Costas: trying you again. If you can find any version other than the published version (except for proofs), I will add it to Academic Works on your behalf with your permission.

If you're too busy, etc. just let me know. best, Monica

Monica Berger
Associate Professor
Instruction and Scholarly Communications Librarian
Ursula C. Schwerin Library
New York City College of Technology, CUNY
300 Jay St.
Brooklyn, NY 11201-1909
718 260-5488
http://library.citytech.cuny.edu
mberger@citytech.cuny.edu

Increase the impact of your scholarship with Academic Works! Ask me how. Keep up with news from us and follow @citytechlibrary on Instagram & Twitter Have a question? Ask a Librarian 24/7!

From: Monica Berger

Sent: Sunday, November 8, 2020 3:59:18 PM

To: Costas Panayotakis

Subject: Re: Beyond the Capitalist Workplace: How the Production of Surplus across the Economy Keeps

Producers Divided

hi Costas: Great! So, green open access, the form where you self-archive in Academic Works after publication, when you transfer copyright to a publisher, you can't share the published version but you can share the AAM or author accepted manuscript.

Sage calls this the accepted version (there is some variation in naming from publisher to publisher). This is the version after review and revisions and before the mss. goes into copyediting.

If you can locate your AAM, I can add it on your behalf to Academic Works with your permission. Sage is liberal that it allows immediate posting of the AAM without any embargo (period of holding back the document). thanks, Monica

Monica Berger
Associate Professor
Instruction and Scholarly Communications Librarian
Ursula C. Schwerin Library
New York City College of Technology, CUNY
300 Jay St.
Brooklyn, NY 11201-1909
718 260-5488
http://library.citytech.cuny.edu
mberger@citytech.cuny.edu

Increase the impact of your scholarship with Academic Works! Ask me how. Keep up with news from us and follow @citytechlibrary on Instagram & Twitter Have a question? Ask a Librarian 24/7!

From: Costas Panayotakis

Sent: Saturday, November 7, 2020 5:12:37 AM

To: Monica Berger

Subject: Re: Beyond the Capitalist Workplace: How the Production of Surplus across the Economy Keeps

Producers Divided

Hi Monica,

yes, that sounds good.

Best, Costas

From: Monica Berger

Sent: Friday, November 6, 2020 5:00:55 PM

To: Costas Panayotakis

Subject: Beyond the Capitalist Workplace: How the Production of Surplus across the Economy Keeps

Producers Divided

Hi Costas: I hope this email finds you well. I get a Google Scholar alert for the college and I was notified about your article, "Beyond the Capitalist Workplace: How the Production of Surplus across the Economy Keeps Producers Divided."

I'm writing to you to ask you to consider self-archiving this article in CUNY's institutional repository, Academic Works https://academicworks.cuny.edu/ny_pubs/.

Adding your article to Academic Works will greatly increase its discoverability and lead to higher readership and citation rates. More importantly, anyone can now read your article including students and scholars in the Global South.

Most publishers allow you to self-archive the final accepted manuscript or AAM (the final peerreviewed draft) but NOT the published version. Let me know if you are interested and I'll let you know more details about the policies specific to this journal and/or publisher. I look forward to hearing from you! Best, Monica

Monica Berger Associate Professor Instruction and Scholarly Communications Librarian Ursula C. Schwerin Library New York City College of Technology, CUNY 300 Jay St. Brooklyn, NY 11201-1909 718 260-5488 http://library.citytech.cuny.edu mberger@citytech.cuny.edu

Increase the impact of your scholarship with Academic Works! Ask me how. Keep up with news from us and follow @citytechlibrary on Instagram & Twitter Have a question? Ask a Librarian 24/7!