Professor Trofimova

Class Discussions for May 4th

We went over the video assignment in class today. Professor Trofimova discussed video editing software. She suggested some free video editing softwares. The Professor showed us a short film she made of her goddaughter who works at the Park Slope Food Coop. Her goddaughter usually works in a restaurant but she was let go because of Covid-19 so she decided to work at the Park Slope Food Coop. It was an interesting short film since she's so positive, considering the current situation.

The Professor went over the iMovie App. She doesn't recommend Adobe Premier because the learning curve for the program is so steep. She taught us how to remove the music from a video and place it somewhere else. She showed us how to trim video and splice them together.

A storyboard is created when you put shots / images together without a voiceover. You should be able to tell a story without any words, written or spoken.
