In the spirit of the OpenLab's ethos of open pedagogy, we'd like to invite you to share with us what you've found helpful.

Either pulling from the In the Spotlight Archive, one of the OpenLab Tours, or from your own perusal of the OpenLab, let us know what piqued your interest. For example: Is there a particular assignment from a course in your discipline (or maybe in another discipline!) you'd like to use? Did you find a grading rubric that made you think more about how you're grading your own assignments? Was there a site you thought was structured particularly well and you enjoyed navigating?

In the form below, tell us what you found and explain why you found it useful. When you submit the form, it will become a post on this site (see below this post). As more people participate, the more resources there will be to share!

Crowdsourced Tour

- Name of What You Found*
  Give the resource you found a brief name. This will be the title of the post you create so keep it short!

- Your Name*

- Resource URL*

- What brought you here?*
  If you're participating as part of college initiative or if you're doing this one your own, let us know below.
  - ○ City Tech Online Seminar
  - ○ First Year Learning Communities
  - ○ Individual
  - ○ Living Lab Seminar
  - ○ OER Seminar
  - ○ Opening Gateways
  - ○ Stem Success Seminar
- What type of resource did you find?*
  Check all that apply

- ○ ☐ Assignment
- ○ ☐ Reading
- ○ ☐ Rubric
- ○ ☐ Organization/Layout
- ○ ☐ Community Building
- ○ ☐ Outside Resource
- ○ ☐ OER
- What did you find useful about this resource?*
- Keywords
  Please tag your resource with three keywords that describe it. Separate your three words with commas.

  Separate tags with commas

- Hidden
  Post Body

Submit

Δ