Process Essay

When the professor introduced Unit 3 assignment which was going to be Repurposing one of the Unit Assignments we have done before, I felt lost. I first thought we would have to create a website and that scared me because technology is not really my thing, therefore I read the slides again, still felt lost but this time because I did not know which Unit assignment I should use. My Discourse Community was too short so I could not find a way to create a website out of the information I had and The Literary Romance Genre was a topic I liked but had not idea on how to create a website that catches people attention since there are tons of it and I wanted it to be as original as possible.

After I spoke to the professor and she explained everything I chose Unit 1 which was the Discourse Community, this website was intended for those who are majoring in accounting but are not sure if that is really their major. I wanted it to be as clear as possible that if at some point I had to show it to someone who is not sure if accounting is what they want, this website could enlighten them and help them choose.

As I was working on this project, there were some information I had to alter. For example, in the beginning, I was just talking about Accounting, but then I realized I was repurposing my first Unit assignment which was about my job at HR Block, therefore, I added information about HR Block and its relation with Accounting. Most of the information stayed the same like the opinions from Tax Pro who are also Accountants, the definition of what an accountant is, how much they earn a year and the subjects they will see in this major, I knew I wanted to add this information since day one.

When it comes to the peer review, their feedback really helped, there were information I needed to add but I had forgotten and their review reminded it to me. There were parts I was not sure about and reading how they liked it or found it concise made me feel confident about my website. Based on the first peer review I changed the color and format of the website, it first was Orange and Yellow, but in one of the review the reviewer stated it did not look professional so I took his advice and change it to Blue which is kind of related to numbers and math. The second peer review was the opinion I needed to finish the website, she stated everything was clear which was what I needed to know to finish the website.

In conclusion, I was able to reach my initial goals with this assignment, it turned out the way I wanted it to and it helped me more than I thought it was going to because this semester I was not quite sure if I wanted accounting as my major, I had many doubts but as I was doing it I found myself enjoying every single step, this project showed me the good things of this career. I was afraid to talk to someone about it because my arguments of why I liked it were not strong enough which is not the case anymore. If I had the chance of doing it again I would add a video of me interviewing the two Accountants that helped me with this project, the way they talk about this Career would convince anyone to choose it as they major.
