Process Essay

When the repurposing assignment was first introduced to me my first reaction was that this should not be too hard. Me assuming that it was not going to be hard to complete was true, because the information for my website was already there and all I needed to add were pictures and a nice layout for my website. My initial plan for the repurposing assignment was to create a website that was all about Abstract Art. I also wanted the website to be a place where people can admire and purchase different Abstract Art pieces online.

My plans for working on this assignment were very manageable since my ideas for the website were not too out of reach but achievable. My plan was simple, all I had to do was create a website with the information I had already had from the previous assignments and then add a lot of visuals relating to Abstract Art. During this assignment something that I did change was the text color on my website. I had changed the text color to white so that it would be easier and more natural for the viewers to see the words on the background of my website. And I also changed the way my home page was set up so that it could look more organized and professional like an actual website.

The things that I kept the same for this assignment was the information about Abstract Art. Most of the research I needed for my website I already had from the previous assignment. That explains the whole repurposing part of this assignment. The feedback that I received for my first peer review was very honest and accurate. My peers who reviewed my website liked the layout, but they recommended that I should add more information and some audio or video to it. The changes that I made to my website after I got my feedback were adding more detailed information about my topic Abstract Art and I also added a visual demonstration of Abstract Art being created.

I was never given a second peer review, so that might have affected the way my website has come together. I feel that I was able to reach my goal of creating a website that talks about everything you need to know about Abstract Art and more. I feel like most of my goals from the start of this project were reached. Something that I learned about myself during this assignment that with the correct information and guidelines I could make a basic website. If I could do anything different at the start of this project it would be to find more resources and information about abstract art, like books and magazines. But because of the circumstances that also was not very possible. I would take my time to find a better layout that would be better for presenting Abstract Art to my audience.
