The Genre I will present is a Photo Essay because it will be easier to show how LGBTQ people are being discriminated against through pictures. Through imagery, I can have you imagine what is happening behind the scenes and show what is happening in the present. I also feel like it is easier to visualize LGBTQ instead of exemplifying it with words because it really helps you understand the full understanding of what is going on in the world. It really helps organize what has happened in order from time and place. I am doing it from a third-person point of view because it really brings out more of the imagery instead of doing it first-person. I feel like you can get more insight because the third person will open up your view on others more than if we are just focusing on the first person point of view. The publication that I have found “New research reveals ‘shocking’ rates of anti-LGBTQ discrimination” from Usatoday really stood out to me that people are banding together to help stop LGBTQ discrimination. According to USAToday “More than 1 in 3 LGBTQ Americans (36%) said they were discriminated against over the past year, and 69% of nonbinary people reported facing discrimination in the same timeframe. Among transgender Americans, the rate was 3 out of 5.” This quote makes me realize that this discrimination is increasing and how can citizen see the potential threat of the difference between LGBTQ. This makes me wonder if the world will ever know the real meaning of equality for all. This is leaning more toward young adults because it really demonstrates that they are witnessing what is real life and what is

I will explain the traits of pride, and love. Pride is something everyone is not everyone can get and with LGBTQ it really shows the amount of dedication and works LGBTQ has put in to make them go out into the world. Also, this really helps them because it reveals to us that pride is something earned and not given because it takes lots of dedication through discrimination to achieve and be proud of being LGBTQ community. Pride also evolves to love because being prideful really determines how far they are willing to push it and creating love out of it really makes a big impact on their life going through adulthood. Pridefulness really tells you how much proud and honored they are about each other and about society.

Furthermore, there is also a trait that is very important that needs to be discussed as to how these traits influence the LGBTQ community. This unique trait is characterized as never letting themselves get toured down and never giving up. Even when discrimination was blocking them it always made them feel like they belong which helped the trait of never giving up into loved and pridefulness. My audience will be young adults because that is when they are going through the experience of the real world and it's not how they expect it to be. Love and pride is the real reason why LGBTQ is able to grow and able to feel loved and loved by the people around you who support the same ideals as you. This unique genre can really show how caring the people and the world to you are. This genre shows how love can transcend into the real world and surpass discrimination and segregation. This genre really shows how much people in the LGBTQ community are willing to push and achieve their greatest accomplishments to become their own personality and characteristic traits. What I mean by this is that they are their own traits to become who they are today. Some additional traits that really show the difference between LGBTQ and other people are their compassion, dedication to their beliefs, and their ideals which transcend the ideals of others. The 4 traits that I have listed so far changed my view on so many different things and show how I can implement them and help other people who have also experienced this sort of discrimination and evolve it into something much greater and better. The last unique trait that the LGTBQ community have is freedom because they have the will to do anything when their minds are set and can even change lives. The last trait is very important because it really shows their spirit and their willingness to surpass their limits and has that characteristic that reveals what they are made of and who they are as human beings.
