Racism in the workplace has been an issue for decades. The impact is huge, it includes lack of work flow, lawsuits as well as many lost customers. As a society we need to come together to create a new strategy that equally works for everyone.

The positive elements of racism in the workplace provides a direction of tackling racism as a whole for the society. Racism in the workplace occurs due to several reasons and the majority of the incidents are reported to and handled by the top managers.

It is important to mention that workplaces often come with a solution that stops the progress of racism or incidences of racism in the workplace.

Similarly, societies can also take steps and motivation from workplaces and take necessary steps to stop the progress of racism in societies, thinking and perspectives of people can be changed through new ways of tackling the same.

In conclusion racism in the workfield is not an issue that can easily be fixed overnight. We need to come together and get rid of a system that has not benefited anyone other than the superior. In schools it is essential for them to change the information being taught non stop.
