ENG1121: English Composition 2

Final Reflection Assignment

12/8/2021

English classes are the best place to develop and learn the basic skills in both writing and reading. In this semester I have learned and improved a lot in my writing and reading skills. As a writer I learned how quality is more important than quantity and how to use my own thinking in a good way. Especially when you have the free will to freely write about any discourse, community and issue. This semester as a reader and writer allowed me to think outside the box and use my creativity. Which is something I thought I lacked in college. The greatest takeaway from these projects is using your imagination and words to shine the light on real life problems. To me this is much more important than writing a scholarly paper.

Writing absolutely needs a lot of practice and interest. There are many English native speakers who are not good at writing. because of the lack of practice and they don't follow the advice of the teacher. A writer needs to have creative power, with creative power, one can write spontaneously.

To be a good writer, one needs to have an aesthetic sense. We cannot achieve these characteristics through study. It is also true that these characteristics are not genetic characteristics. During this class I developed the organization of my article. I learned how much chronology of ideas is really important because the reader can understand what I want to say and he can imagine the story and the ideas that I wrote. A writer always needs to practice and learn and develop himself in order to become professional.

In addition this class was also an opportunity to develop myself as a reader. For me reading is not as interesting as writing because I always liked to share my ideas. But in this class I start enjoying reading when I start reading short articles because they give me ideas when I write. I like to read short articles or short stories, but now after standing this class I felt I'm ready to read books and novels and that's what I did. I started reading novels and I improved so much in reading and I can finish a book in 10 days.

Because of this class I learned how to read the assignment and understand what the teacher wanted me to do. Before I always had a missing point in my assignment but now I think I'm getting better. Moreover, writing helped me to improve my answers during assignments. I can express my ideas in a better way and this is what I was lacking. In addition, at the beginning of the semester I was afraid of changing subjects. I always liked to have easy and clear subjects to write about. I get always nervous when I see a new topic, but now I learned how to handle challenging subjects and I'm so glad and happy that I improved.

In the end, if there's any advice I can give to students, you need to practice but practice can't be effective if you don't pay attention in the class and follow your teacher's advice, because those advice are the key to improve in both writing and reading and you will use them in the future. When I joined this class I was hoping to learn more about writing and what happened I gained a lot of knowledge and tips concerning writing and that's what I was looking for. I enjoyed so much learning in this class and I will keep learning and use what I learned during this class in the future.
