Final Reflection

Some of the major encounters that I learned about myself as a writer is that I realized that my writing isn't as excellent as others. I felt as if I was not a very good writer since my first language is not English . Sometimes It's hard for me to express myself in a way that people would understand as I elaborate in my essay and my other assignments . However, during this semester, I obtained new skills. I gained logic as I research my work , as well as writing essays. I also learned about the areas that I need to focus on or address certain issues that I have in my grammar. That way, I'd be able to correct my errors and improve my work. Over the course of the semester, I feel that I have grown as a writer in many ways. During my time in class, I have come to improve on those skills even more. A lot of what I learned in high school was completely different from this course. Back in high school, my class worked on several different types of essays. I remember that I have to rewrite the books that I have been reading and then put it in my own words. It was complicated since my teacher didn't have the time to assist me in those situations. However, in this class, I feel like I have grown to become a more prepared writer because of all the useful information that I have learned. Campus resources such as the Writing Center have also contributed tremendously to my success in my English course. I am convinced that everything that I have learned this current semester will be transferrable to all my future classes, because it is most likely that I have to write other scholarly essays, lab reports in the future . Some of the many things that I have learned over the semester are arranging sentences grammatically, and of course . I also learned that feedback helps with your growth and allows for you to fix the things you did wrong in the next paper, because you will know what to do and what not to do. I know that all of these things can be used in my future classes throughout my college career, and I think it is an essential tool to obtained these skills. I can confirm that during this semester, I encounter some challenges such as writing long essays in a very short amount of time and trying to elaborate new ideas to my writing. It was hard. Sometimes my mind is full of so many thoughts .that I think its unbearable. I do think that I don't have the capability to explain certain words in a way that people can understand. As to fluently deliver my words in an easier level. However, when I was going through my classmates' essays. I gained some ideas and apply those in my own words, and it help me a lot! Since English is my second language, listening to my classmates giving their opinions to any certain topic was helpful as well as talking to them in group discussions. All I can say is that this class was interesting and fun. This semester was enjoyable for me. The professor was patient and kind. This is a class that I would strongly suggest.
