

I started this class thinking I have nothing else to learn in English. I really thought I knew all about all the writing methods. I was thinking that with all the English that I been learning I won't have much stuff to learn anymore. But what I forgot was learning never ends. Through this class I learned a lot. The Different Units writings we had to do really deepens my writing capacity. Even the small writing really messed with my quality of putting my thought out there.

Through the unit writing we had to write to one of our discourse communities. I wrote to my managers at work about something I really hate their doing at that time. I didn't know I could put all that thought that been bugging me out into a letter. When I was writing it I felt like it was therapy. I didn't know writing about something that's deranging us can help us heal.

Unit writing 2 was the one that really helped me put myself out there. While using trying to get sources for my writing I learn a lot about researching. I know more about how to navigate in a library. I had to read a lot about my subject in different article which helped me learned more about my subject. I got to know a lot more about citing a reference. I really had no idea about referencing and all that from my previous English classes. Referencing is a powerful tool when you want to argument your point. The more referencing I was making the more I was learning about my subject. This really help me go to a next level with my writings.

Unit writing 3 was for me about a different way to share my ideas to who wants to hear it. We went through different writings method to share our research subject in Unit 2. I learned about different ways to share my research. I had to use my method of writing to draw people in to hear about the subject that I am fighting for. All this assignment helped me boost my confidence.

The work I did this semester help me add more knowledge to what I did last semester. Now I know more, I moved up the ladder. My writing skills got better because I tried writing about new ideas that I never thought about.

This year I found a new way of expressing myself through reflecting. Most of the assignments I've done this semester were really based on reflecting. saying what we feel about something. I really struggled to reflect on what I felt about something for a while now mainly because my English is not that polished. This assignment really brings into play how clearly you can use words to reflect an experience. The thing I learned the most about myself is that even in a place where everything is hard for me to do I usually find a way at the end.

During this difficult time Writing about a subject That I care about and want to fight kept me busy. Keeping up with all the assignment was hard. With all the online and new system of uploading work, writing this year was harder because online is a new way of working for us and we're exploring it every day. Also writing through openlab is a little bit tricky. You really need to double check if your work went through. I think people taking this course next semester should really get themselves use to blackboard. They should really want to make an impact in the world.
