"No one is born hating another person because of the color of his skin or his background or his religion." said Nelson Mandela. I am Afroza Yasmin and I am talking about inequality, freedom from discrimination. I want to tell the audience how people unfairly work in the whole world. Nelson Mandela said no one born hating another person that's really true but in the whole world people wanted more money and always only they wanted. wealthy people get more opportunity other than poor people. Therefore, I want to change the audience's mind. For my projects I chose the audience government, teenagers, in the society who have negative perspective about poor people.

People are not getting enough opportunity for their life and most of people are who lived in poverty, who are homeless. If I look at Myanmar government forces to people to leave their house and everything. I am talking about Rohingya who faced so many problems in their life and many people died. They have now moved to Bangladesh. However, still in their life and children's life also darkness because children can't get education, they work for their family. Most of people are uneducated and so they don't understand how it can impact their child's life. Also, most of wealthy people don't care about them and don't help them. This is the one example that the government should know how people suffer in their life. Also, In my resources I talk about gender like between men and women and how women get less equality other than men. If we look at poorest country, for example Myanmar, Bangladesh, Saudi Arabia etc. women can't drive, women can't work, women need permission when they want to go outside. So we need to improve this, we need to show the audience that equality, right, freedom that not only you or one person, that's for everybody. Government should focus on everybody, not only for specific people.

Some country government give lot of opportunity but poorer can't get because they don't know so we need to support them. Therefor, I can say if we want make peaceful society so we need to be together, and help others. Open some teaching program for uneducated people, who don't understand and teach them what can be better for them. make religion programs for all and support them one to another. Open program for women that they can get opportunity and educationally.

Finally, I want to say don't separate between each other. We all are human and are kind to others. teenagers are the next generation so they should learn how to help others, how to bring peace. If they don't learn that can affect future of poorest because again poorest get less opportunity, will make gender discrimination. make equality, and freedom, if you don't have freedom that's means you can't do many things in your life so first you need to change negative perspective to positive perspective to others, give equality for all, and make freedom for all.
