

Eric Huang

Professor Penner

15 December 2021

To anyone that is reading this letter or pdf file, what I recommend you do when taking this class is to think about what you want to say especially if you're confused about something relating to class. Never rush the assignments given to you and remember to start them as early as you possibly can because starting them later where it's supposed to be due will mess you up. Procrastinating is not a good thing especially if you sleep very, very little. If you have any questions that you're not comfortable asking, ask them after class when everyone leaves or just email if that works too. When working on a project paper, take your time and never rush them because that will just ruin your paper and not to mention project papers are an every month thing. They're not too difficult, so do not stress out as long as you get enough sleep, unlike me. I'm not good at giving advice, so I will just say this once; always show up to class, never skip them and keep telling yourself to show up to class even if you can't wake up to them.