Unit 3, Artist Statement

Word count : 554

What I have created is a power point slide to show and encourage more people who see this, to agree with what I present, and how this can affect all of us a race but as well out wellbeing of our planet, and our life around us. As well by doing this I hope to accomplish the idea how renewable energy and sustainability is important in the world today.

For this project called Renewable energy and sustainability I presented it in a power point is I wanted to attract more people to read it, rather than having to read a whole 4-page annotated bibliography. The images I have chosen in this power point is to keep the reader more engaged, I want people to visualize how certain things can look in a near future. In my fourth slide I made a little art design that I want people to realize what people think, for example people in government how politics get involved in this. Now obvious a person in government would never say that in public but I wanted to use this type of technique to show people how certain things can come into play. I made a lung talk saying “Can you humans not see that you need me to survive” obviously a lung cant talk but I want people to get a message that our health is at risk, how an essential organism can be potentially damaged. That something everyone understands, and its really just using this technique to give people a visual of on how our health can be at risk. Little visuals like that is what I intend the reader tries to understand and make connections with other things related to that image or icon. In every other slide I always try to put images related to what is in the text box so it can be much easier to understand for my audience.

How I expect people to react to this is to show a sense that they have the power to change, our future, how we can have a better tomorrow for many generations to come, I want people to look at the images and imagine a a place where there is no pollution. That history has its eyes on them, and to stand up for something that is right and could possibly save the human race. Well this work I have done relates to a many previous projects I have done not just in this class but in other classes too. The most recent one is being my annotated bibliography, and another power point project that I showed how solar panels work and the pros and cons to it and why we need it.

To conclude of this statement I would like to say that this power point is intended to make connections with other things related to this topic, and how those things can also affect the outcome how we end up treating our planet. I want people to go on with their daily life and think that they can do something because we have the power to change and prevent many things from happening. I wanted to make this really clear to the reader for them to understand just how crucial this topic is in today world, with the visuals I have gathered and created.
