

Cindy Cortes Corona

11/18/2020

ENG1121

Unit 3 Writing Assignment

Part 2 of the project

Unit 3 Writing assignment

While majoring in human services, I thought it would be interesting to talk about a cause that is rarely brought up. As a human service professional, it is important to focus on your client's needs instead of their wants. Youth gang violence is a very, very serious topic that many do not address or even bring it up unless it results in someone's death or for their own benefit. Through this pamphlet, I wanted it to look as if it was a real handed out pamphlet. Not just any pamphlet that seems boring and dull, but a pamphlet that is given out to people or attracts someone's attention. Which in this case for me, it certainly catches my attention.

In the pamphlet, I provide strong information about youth gangs and their history in the U.S with their expansion throughout the east and west coast. I was able to get out my main points from my paper to the pamphlet very easily, way more than I thought I would be able to. In the pamphlet, I was able to provide my research information which covered the basics of gangs and how they first began. I also provided information as if I was advertising an actual agency by putting down programs and events that my "agency will hope to have" along the way.

Overall, I want the general public to understand why and how it is important to take care of our youth and our young ones. For example, it is easy for children especially in their early teen years to be manipulated and lied to at such a young age. It is most likely that they'll do something that they'll regret in 5-10 years and do things with no hesitation. And through my pamphlet, I hope to change parents, grandparents, aunts, uncles, cousins, sisters, and brothers to communicate with their young ones. Especially since the statistics of young kids joining gangs are high, we should all always make time to talk to the youth because they are our future.