Process Essay

When the professor asked us about repurposing our major writing assignments between discourse community and genre, I thought it would be easy to complete the project. Since I liked writing about my discourse community, I decided to do my website on my discourse community. Even though I thought it would be easy to do the project, I had to spend a lot of time to complete the website. I made my website very simple using Google Slides. It was easy for me to create the website on Google Slides since it is very simple. My homepage was clear and simple with an introduction and a background theme. My website had a different page for each idea shared.

I had to alter my website by adding more information about my discourse community to make it look clear. What stayed the same was my homepage because it looked okay to me. I felt okay about the feedback I got from my first peer review. I just had to make a little change. I thought about changing my background themes of my website. I felt quite good after the second peer review. I had to explain more about each page. I think I was able to reach some of my goals because I was able to do it according to the instructions at the same time I am not fully satisfied because it looks very simple.

In the process of this project, I learned and understood how to create and organize a website. If I had the time to start it all over again, I would add more slides to explain more about my discourse community and add more graphics to explain vocabulary.
