College is something essential for all students who are seeking to excel in their education, which leads to more employment opportunities, and better livelihood options in life, which is irrefutably something immensely necessary. Unfortunately over the years, these opportunities for humble students are closing over time, the costs of adequate colleges are increasing in large numbers, and students are feeling suffocated due to the limited aid as well as limited opportunities to colleges that conduct too numerous young scholars of this generation give up the idea of graduating and obtaining their certification. Thanks to my research I now know a lot of reasons why this is a huge problem in the United States educational system, issues like students being incapable of assisting a college due to the massive financial loan that they will sooner or later have to pay, in cities like New York City whose college tuitions were around $20,204 in 2020 to 2021 which means that is $5,284 higher than the U.S average college loan showing how extremely fortunate students who are assisting an institute is. A few decades ago colleges weren't as expensive as they are now due to inflation and many other circumstances in the system. I did this poster to show this, to demonstrate that most of the time we consider that college is an immediate and a straightforward path and not so costly, unfortunately, many students are hit by the reality of paying thousands of dollars in a career that in the future, they may not like or that they can't make a living out of it. The government seems to not be interested in this monumental problem leaving many young adults not interested in educating themselves and improving themselves thanks to the ridiculously expensive prices, I have met so many individuals who would like to graduate but shamefully, it just feels like climbing a mountain of money to "try" to be able to do something with all of that "knowledge gain at the cost of being in debt for numerous years.
