SPECIAL GUEST: AMIRA DHALLA

Director of Impact Partnerships and Programs

Ms. Dhalla has spent over a decade in technology, working on issues related to digital rights, privacy, security, and equity with global organizations and communities. Together, she works with educators and activists to design participatory curricula and resources to make emerging technology more inclusive, open, and safe. Most recently, she was the Director of Impact Partnerships and Programs with a focus on digital privacy and security at Consumer Reports. Amira works on projects that improve the security and privacy of emerging products and tools in the marketplace while also tackling topics like discriminatory technologies, deceptive design, and trust and safety.
