WHAT IS ILLUSTRATION?

So, what is illustration?

Illustration is NOT just images . . . Illustration is storytelling.

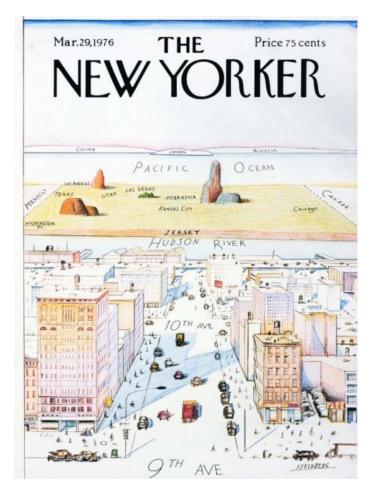

Illustration is NOT a media or a style, illustration is communication.

We are saying something to our world.

John Hendrix

ICON7 President's Address 2012

Lets examine what we THINK is by first looking through a few images that we know to be illustrations with the purpose of finding the commonalities and differences.

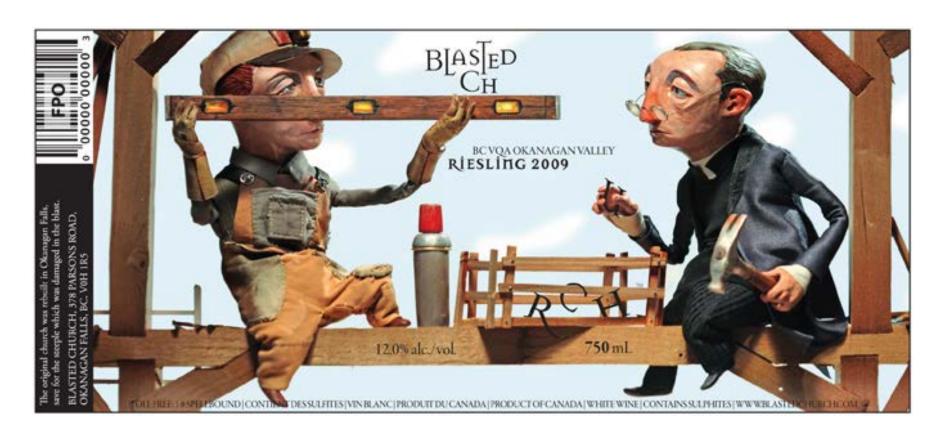

Saul Steinberg,

"View of the World From 9th Avenue," The New Yorker cover, March 29, 1976, colored pencil and ink

Tomer Hanuka, "Perfect Storm," The New Yorker cover, February 10, 2014, digital

Ralph Steadman for Flying Dog Brewery, ink on paper.

Red Nose Studio, label for Blasted Church Riesling, sculptural illustration

WORKING DEFINITION:

Illustration is not defined by the method it is made by, but instead it is defined by the purpose it is made for, and ultimately by the context of its use.

WHAT IS ILLUSTRATION?

- " Illustration takes disparate elements, text and image, and does not make a jumbled Frankenstein, but a new thing — a whole that is greater than the sum of its parts. What I love about illustration is this stark humility — it is willing to subvert itself to deliver its content."
- -- Illustrator John Hendrix from This is Culture, ICON 7 keynote speech

So the act of being commissioned or made to solve a specific problem or illustrate a specific concept, in fact is what makes illustration, illustration!

Norman Rockwell, Saturday Evening Post cover, October 8, 1938, oil on canvas

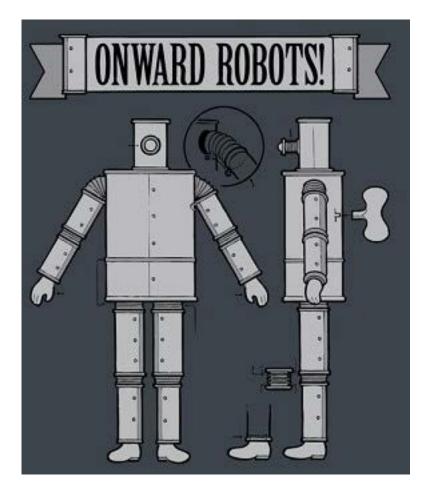

Illustrations are brought to life through their context

Ralph Steadman label for Flying Dog Brewery

Label for Blasted Church Riesling by Red Nose Studio

Chris Ware

Yes, arrival at the final art does matter, but our primary aim in this course is to develop an understanding of the process used by illustration professionals.

By the end of the course, you will all become illustration creation machines!

Illustrator = Visual Problem-Solver

Great news! You, the hardworking illustrator, have just received a call from a dream client!

WHERE TO BEGIN?

Nick Dewar for The Atlantic

- You've discussed the idea with the art director (AD) and expressed interest in the project.
- You've agreed on a timeline and compensation.
- Great! The next step is usually for the AD to send you a brief, which is a written overview of the project that outlines exactly the scope of the job. If we think about illustration as problem solving, then the brief should outline the problem.
- The solution to the assignment will be in your personal visual reaction to something.
- Usually that something is text, such as a story, an article, or an ad.

You the illustrator are responsible to identify the problem to solve. After all, if you aren't sure what the problem is, you can't solve it.

John Hendrix, the Rule of the Rich

What problem is John Hendrix solving through this visual reaction?

The next step is to thoroughly understand the subject matter. Having a gut reaction to a topic might make you think you understand it.

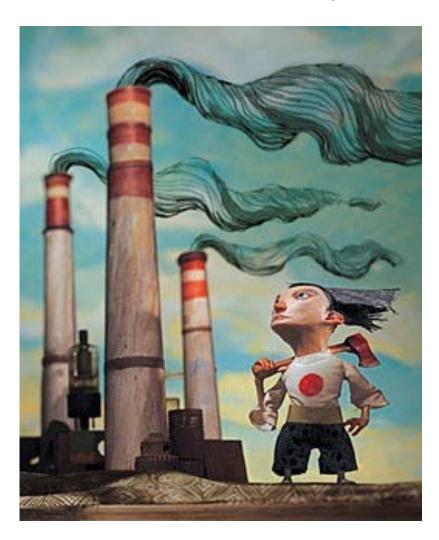

You don't.

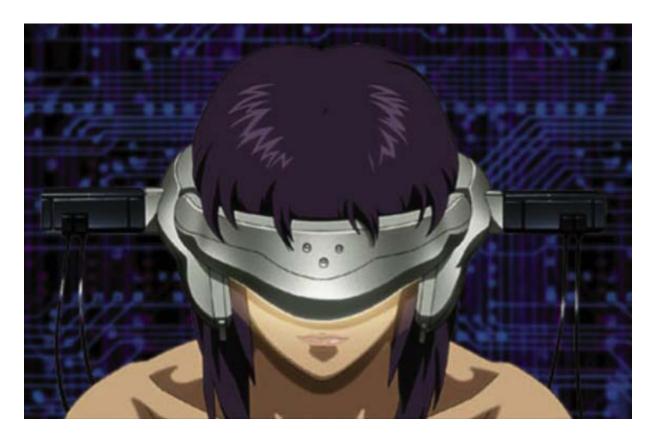

Allison Bruce, "Stem Cell Hierarchy," cover for Cancer Cell, April 13, 2010

To create an interesting, intelligent, and unique solution we must carefully examine the subject matter through research before putting pencil to paper.

Research Is Idea Factory Fuel!

How do We Research?

Masamune Shirow, "Major Motoko Kusanagi," Ghost in the Shell

Libraries, museums, books, films, first-hand accounts, journalism and of course the Internet all should be part of your researching skill set.

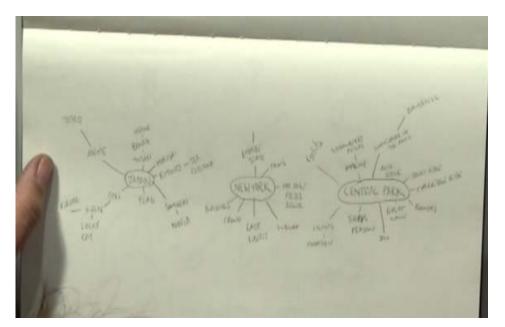

Brainstorm Your Way Out of Boring!

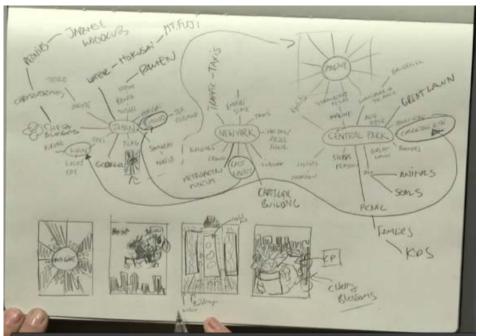

Jacky Gilbertson, "Fell Asleep While Drawing"

The most important part of an illustration is not the execution; it's the concept behind it. After all, if it's not a good idea, why bother?

- 1. Look at the brief carefully and pick it apart.
- Research.
- 3. Then, Brainstorm in your sketchbook.

WORD WEBS - One way to Brainstorm!

You've read the brief. You've done some research.

Now, begin by writing down any key words or any ideas that come to mind immediately upon reading the brief.

This Brainstorm is for a series of posters commissioned by the Consul General of Japan for an annual cultural festival taking place in New York's Central Park.

Key words: Japan, Central Park, New York.

Next allow yourself to free associate on those three key words. Write down any words or ideas that come to your mind based on the brief.

There aren't wrong answers.

It is important not to censor your ideas—just let them flow. Often the ones that seem random end up inspiring the most creative solutions!

From Brainstorm to Thumbnails!

