

Who's Who in Illustration: Roles in Commercial Art

JILLIAN TAMAKI, SELF-PORTRAIT

Firstly there is you, the illustrator or the visual problem-solver.

Your job is to provide unique content and concepts for the next role, the client, solving their problem through visual media, in the time frame they require.

KIRK WALLACE FOR PLANET NUTSHELL

The client is the person, publication, or company, that has the need or problem that the illustration will be created to answer.

They commission the illustration and will ultimately be paying for it.

Most of the time, the person charged with establishing the look of a particular publication, event, film, advertisement, or game, is the Art Director.

The art director is typically the person the illustrator has the most direct interaction with. It is the collaboration of art director and illustrator that ultimately shapes the final illustration.

For the purposes of this course, when working on an assignment, you can think of your Professor in the role of your Art Director.

FRANÇOISE MOULY, ART DIRECTOR, THE NEW YORKER, SURROUNDED BY COVERS SHE'S COMMISSIONED

The Art Director shapes the overall look of their particular publication, or whatever creative project they are working on, by choosing which illustrator they feel is best suited for creating the kind of image that the client is looking for.

Illustration, typical workflow:

- The art director or client reaches out to the illustrator with an assignment and sets a timeline for delivery.
- The illustrator brainstorms multiple ways to successfully solve the visual problem.
- Through multiple thumbnail drawings the illustrator refines a great number of loose ideas into a few of their best ideas, sketched out clearly to share with their art director.
- The illustrator shares their best ideas with their art director.
- The art director gives the illustrator feedback.
- Integrating feedback, the illustrator creates a more detailed drawing of the agreed upon idea for their art director.
- This drawing is shared once more and the art director and illustrator then agree on a drawing to finalize.
- The illustrator creates the final art piece.
- The illustrator delivers final art to the art director according to the timeline they agreed upon in the beginning.
- The illustration is printed, published, or somehow sent out into the world, brought to life through use in its intended context.
- The illustrator finally rests.

The importance of multiple solutions

Yuko Shimizu concept sketches

for Time Magazine

Photo-Illustration by Jim Naughten for TIME

Yuko Shimizu

How Many Thumbnails Is Too Many?

The simple answer here is you can never have too many.

Thumbnails are loose drawings coming directly from the heart.

They are inspiration and creative energy in its most raw form.

Sam Bosma's thumbnails for just one illustration for Plan Sponsor magazine.

SAM BOSMA'S THUMBNAILS FOR PLAN SPONSOR MAGAZINE.