

Julio Falero

ENG 1101

September 21/2020

Professor Jennifer Sears

The Story Of How I Came To Admiring Education

It all started when I was starting off in middle school. As soon as I began my middle school journey my parent's started to talk to me about making sure I'm trying my best now because they wanted me to do all the things they didn't get to do. There was one thing my parents told me that really stuck with me, they said "Knowledge is power that helps you reach your goals in life and that the only person to stop you from reaching your goal is yourself". This quote from them made me believe I could do anything I want to achieve but I have to put the effort and dedication in it too. So I've been putting in that work to be a better version of myself and that if a teacher or a mentor tells me I could ask them any questions I have, that I should tell them and I did cause I knew I had a long way to go in life.

I've always wanted to go to college because no one in my family has ever been to college and that I was a first-born on my father's side and that just excited me even more. At last it was graduation day and I've had this sense of happiness, more confidence because I earned the right to graduate with the other students, and that also I was earned with four trophies for being a great student that everyone would have relied on. My parent's overjoyed because they always knew I could do it. I also had friends too, we all had good times together and we all taught each other things that would benefit us in the future. During the summer time I was just having fun and preparing for HighSchool because my parents told me that would be the main challenge, so I decided to have as much fun as possible because I knew that the next few years were gonna be the hardest for me.

During the beginning of my HighSchool year I gained a few friends that have been here since middle school and I have realized that having friends is more than just having fun it's about having a deep connection. This has also taught me that in some ways we are all in this together. Then Summer came and I applied for my first job. The reason I chose to work is because my parents said that this world is all about money, that money is what you need for the things you want and that working gives me a different perspective on things. One specific thing that I learned is that hard work always pays off. And to never let anyone tell you that you can't do something.

My boss told me something on the last day I was working and she said if you want something done you're gonna have to do it yourself cause you can't depend on someone all the time. By the second year of HighSchool I knew all the teachers in the school and they gave me some tips to become better with the knowledge I now have. Each lesson has their own benefits to be successful in life. As time passed my school offered me a job there after school and I gladly accepted to gain more experience in the future. I've made so many connections with everyone in school, some more than others and that they have taught me so many things and solutions that are easier for me. And that I could also pass it down to someone else someday to continue the legacy of knowledge that really needs help. As time went past four years later, I have worked for four years and kept on keeping my word to graduate from HighSchool. I've learned a lot while being in HighSchool from Saturday School, sometimes lunchtime, and also after school but my favorite was when we were all having a good time but also helping each other with work during classes. And at that moment when I graduated with my friends is that no one is ever truly alone and that you could always learn new things especially from people who have been doing it a lot longer.